21 KILLED IN OHIO MISHAPS, 9 HURT HERE

Eight Killed By Train When It Hits Auto at Crossing In Upper Sandusky.

8 INJURED AT PLYMOUTH

Mansfielder Knocked Down By Car as He Crosses Street, Suffers Hip Fracture.

Although nine persons were hurt in minor accidents, Richland county escaped listing on the state's week-end fatality records topped by the killing of eight Michigan residents in an auto-train crash at Upper Sandusky early yesterday. Ohio's week-end death toll was 21.

One Mansfielder suffered injuries when struck by an auto yesterday afternoon at Mulberry and First streets. W. W. Carter, 115 Columbia avenue, received a fractured right hip and cuts and bruises about the face and hands when he was hit by a car driven by Ivan F. Bauer, 223 Saxton road.

Bauer took Carter to his home where he was treated by his family physician. The driver told police that the Columbia avenue man stepped into the path of his auto.

At Plymouth, two cars crashed in a freak accident injuring seven of 11 passengers. State highway patrolmen reported that an auto driven by Kenneth Donnenwirth, 20, of 19 High street, Plymouth, collided with another parked on the wrong side of Sandusky street.

Donnenwirth told the patrolmen that the other car, owned by Wilson T. Day, 31, of Sandusky street, had its lights on and that he crashed into it after trying to pass the parked car on the right side.

Day, operator of the parked car, was uninjured but his wife and four other passengers suffered cuts and bruises. Donnenwirth and two passengers also received minor injuries.

Seated in Day's car were his wife, Mrs. and Mrs. John Bradford and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Baker, all of Plymouth. Riding with Donnenwirth were Robert

SHORT OF HELP

Sandusky Also Experiences Housing Shortage.

SANDUSKY—(AP)—Housing and labor shortages, growing rapidly with the speeding of the $11,000,000 Plum Brook ordnance plant three miles away, plagued this lake city of 24,626 today.

Virtually all residents of the TNT plant's 7,000-acre tract have been evacuated, sending hundreds of persons into the city seeking dwellings.

Intensifying the housing problem is the steady arrival of transients hoping to obtain jobs at the plant, which is expected to hire 5,000 workers.

Unused and run-down houses are being remodeled and in some cases even store-rooms are being furnished for living quarters. A camp with facilities for 105 house trailers has been established south of the city.

HUNT GUNMAN

Police Say He Raped Co-ed Near Ohio State Campus.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Police today sought a Negro gunman who, they said, raped an Ohio State university co-ed after locking her escort in the rumble seat of an automobile near the university's experimental farms.

The students, both 19 years old, were treated in University hospital. They told authorities the Negro, about 35, approached their parked car and menaced them with a revolver.

Woman Killed, Police Seek Two Men For Questioning.

INDIANAPOLIS — (AP) — Mrs. Gertrude Hatch, 21, plunged to her death from a seventh floor apartment last night and police today were seeking for questioning two men reported to have been among 16 guests at a week-end party in the flat.

Sergeant Fay C. Davis of the homicide squad said the other 14 had been questioned and released.

CRUSHED UNDER CAR

MT. VERNON —(AP)— Francis Boeshart, 17, of nearby Danville, died today of injuries suffered as an automobile slipped from an jack and fell on him.

Glider Invasion—Newest Art of War

A century and a half ago Napoleon drew up an elaborate plan for attacking the British from the air—by balloon. But even he would be amazed by the latest technique of invasion from the sky by glider, transport plane and parachute.

Germany made the fabled isle of Crete the test tube for the first large-scale tryout of this war innovation. Here you see an artist's conception of the result—the most spectacular aerial invasion in history. Although there were reports that Nazi parachutists wore uniforms other than their own, particularly New Zealand, the Germans denied it. Regulation Nazi parachutists' uniforms are pictured here.

War gliders, carrying up to 14 fighting men, can travel easily the distance from Nazi-held Greece to British-held Crete. They also may be towed in "trains" as in this case, the towing device fitted in tail of the plane and nose of the glider. This attachment is controlled with a slip release, enabling both glider and plane to cast loose simultaneously—miles away from the objective.

RAVENNA PLANT WORK RESUMED

10,400 Men Return To Jobs at Arsenal; Leaders of Strike Are Barred.

(By Associated Press)

Construction resumed today on the $30,000,000 Ravenna arsenal after a three-day shutdown caused by an "unauthorized" strike by part of the workmen.

Construction officials said 10,400 men returned to work. American Federation of Labor agents stood by the gates to prevent the admittance of those they held responsible for the strike, but they declined to say how many men were kept from work. Kenneth Statler, business agent for the Hod Carriers union, said the "Un-American" leaders who precipitated the strike would be tried by their unions.

Negotiations were scheduled to begin this afternoon upon demands for a 25-cent increase in the present 65-cent basic wage for the 5,000 common laborers at the arsenal.

Meanwhile, labor walkouts were due to end today at the Cincinnati Gas and Electric company and the New Lexington Roof Tile plant of the Ludowici-Celdon company.

Philip G. Phillips, regional director of the national labor relations board, announced at Cincinnati that all matters in the dis-

DE VALERA HITS DRAFT PROPOSAL

Eire Premier Objects to British Plan For Conscription.

DUBLIN—(AP)—Prime Minister Eamon De Valera of Eire denounced today the British proposal to apply conscription to neighboring northern Ireland as a "grievous attack" on a "fundamental human right."

The Dail Eireann was packed as the lanky premier rose to make his second objection against the British conscription plan.

He recalled to the members, who had been called into special session to consider the proposal, that he had protested to the British government even before the outbreak of war.

$1,250,000 U. S. Job Goes to Shelby Firm

Autocall Company Receives Largest Defense Contract Yet Awarded In Mansfield Area; Rush Expansion.

Largest single contract to be made in the Mansfield area for national defense materials was awarded today to the Autocall company at Shelby.

Totaling $1,250,000, the order calls for the construction of electrical anti-aircraft control equipment. The contract totals more than the combined total of all defense orders let to Mansfield district firms.

As the result of the government order, C. C. Skiles, president of the company, said a $200,000 addition to the plant, now under construction, will be rushed to completion.

Production, which will get under way immediately, must be completed by March 31, 1942, Skiles added.

The company will hire an additional 125 employes, doubling its working force and expects to start on a 24-hour daily schedule within the next week or ten days. The plant is now operating between eight and 16 hours per day.

Officials of the company declined to disclose the number of units to be produced, but said that the equipment consisted of complete assemblies.

They said the additional employes would be hired immediately and would be trained by the company's own personnel for the specialized production work.

The addition to the plant was started April 3. It is scheduled to be completed July 2 and will increase manufacturing space by more than 100 per cent.

The improvement alone will cost $100,000, and the additional $100,000 will be spent for machinery.

The Autocall company manufactures electrical, signalling and control equipment.

EXPECTS ACTION ON RATE OFFER

Porch Says Council Utilities Committee May Decide on Contract Tonight.

Whether the public utilities committee of city council will recommend the proposed five-year contract offer of the Ohio Public Service company to lower domestic electric rates in Mansfield will probably be decided at a meeting tonight, Russell D. Porch, committee chairman, announced today.

Porch said that the committee, Councilmen Fred Miller, Arthur Croak and himself, had conferred Friday to discuss the ruling by City Solicitor Marion D. Ward, jr., that the rules and regulations of the Ohio Public Utilities commission would remain binding on the company. Another meeting was decided upon for tonight.

Ward's ruling removed one of the stumbling blocks in the committee's attempt to reach agreement on the offer. Fear had been expressed that the contract would remove the power of the commission entirely. The contract must be approved by the state body and then would be in effect for five years with-

Capital Circles Believe U. S. May Turn Over More Ships To Bolster British.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON —(INS)— The White House today accused Berlin of attempting to "becloud" President Roosevelt's fireside speech in advance of its delivery as the chief executive tore up an original draft and began a general revision "in the light of rapidly changing conditions abroad."

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Destruction of the battle cruiser Hood aroused speculation today whether President Roosevelt contemplates reinforcing British sea power with transfer of additional American warships.

Congressional advocates of more effective aid to Great Britain are looking to the president for a more aggressive program immediately. Some of his cabinet and congressional aides are demanding repeal of the neutrality act.

But it would be a matter of weeks rather than days for congress to act on a neutrality act repealer. Belief prevails here, therefore, that Mr. Roosevelt will seek some speedier means of furthering our aid to the British, not only to reinforce the British armament against the Axis but in a move to bolster British morale in a dark hour.

Mr. Roosevelt will address the nation and the world at 9:30 p. m. (EST) tomorrow in a broadcast fireside chat which is expected not only to step up the tempo of aid to Britain but perhaps to reveal that our own national defense operation must be speeded up.

Speculation regarding a further transfer of American warships was based on the insistence of Mr. Roosevelt and his cabinet aides that the Axis must not be permitted to gain control of the seas. With the British navy hard hit now it might be necessary to reinforce the Union Jack to keep it flying.

Loss of the Hood and reverses in the Eastern Mediterranean appeared to put the British in the worst position they have ex-

RANSACK HOME

Burglars Get $234 In Cash, Jewelry at Residence Here.

Burglars, who ransacked the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Chandler, 642 West Fourth street, stole approximately $234 in jewelry, Mansfield police said today.

Mrs. Chandler reported the burglary to police last night when she and her husband arrived home from a week-end visit. Identification Officer Ernest Fuller investigated the robbery and made fingerprint tests.

The jewelry taken included several rings and bracelets, a woman's wrist watch and a pair of golf cuff links. Small amounts of cash and other valuables were not taken.

Entry to the house was made through a garage built into the cellar. Fuller reported that the burglars forced the lock on the garage door and then smashed another door leading into the laundry room.

Air-Borne Nazi Tanks Bolster Invading Force

Germans Say British Fleet Has Been Driven Off; Navy's Quest For German Atlantic Fleet Goes On; King Reaches Egypt.

(By Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler's aerial invaders of Crete, reinforced by air-borne tanks and sea-transported troops, penetrated British defense lines today in an attack west of Canea, the Crete capital, and Axis reports asserted that the British fleet had been driven off after suffering enormous losses.

British Middle East headquarters, acknowledging Nazi inroads under cover of a violent assault by the German Luftwaffe, said that New Zealand troops were counter-attacking and that "severe fighting is continuing" in the Canea sector.

The Germans now apparently had three strong footholds on the 160-mile-long island—in the regions of Canea, Candia and Retimo—and the Nazi high command reported "a steady flow of reinforcements" was arriving from Greek mainland bases, 100 miles away.

British general headquarters' description of the German attack "west of Canea" presumably referred to the vicinity of Nazi-held Malemi airdrome.

British Tommies, along with fight-hardened Australians and New Zealanders, were said to have inflicted "heavy casualties" on the Germans in the 7-day-old struggle.

Reports reaching Cairo said that over the week-end the Nazi Luftwaffe had bombarded Crete's principal cities on a terrific scale, comparable to the bombing of Rotterdam, Holland, when Hitler's invasion armies stormed into the lowland countries last spring.

These reports said Crete natives escaped severe loss of life by taking shelter into the island's caves, which include the famed Labyrinth and the Dictaean cave, legendary birthplace of Zeus.

London sources disclosed that British marines are now engaged in the battle, but they declined to say whether substantial reinforcements were being landed to fight the Nazi invaders.

The German high command declared that Nazi warplanes and Italian air and naval forces sank a total of 11 cruisers, eight destroyers, a submarine and five speedboats in the eastern Mediterranean since the conflict began last Tuesday.

Despite these reported setbacks, Maj.-Gen. T. B. Heywood, chief of the British military mis-

SAYS CONVOYS 'OPEN WAR ACT'

German Admiral Warns U. S.; Berlin Claims Statement Puts 'Cards on Table.'

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN—Grand Admiral Erich Raeder's warning that American convoys for contraband to England would be an "open war act" which would be met by the guns of the German navy if necessary removed "all possibility of misunderstanding over the significance of convoys and what Germany holds to be an act of war," authoritative sources declared today.

The statement of the commander in chief of the German navy, made in an interview with Domei, Japanese news agency, and published here yesterday by DNB, official German news agency, "puts in precise technical language what has been generally known for some time, especially through the Fuehrer's words," in the opinion of the Wilhelmstrasse.

Raeder described the American patrol system as "aggressive" and said German warships would be justified in engaging any American naval units trying to protect cargoes of contraband for England.

"We have laid our sea cards open on the table," authorized sources further commented,

Admiral Raeder told the Berlin representative of Domei that in-

BLACKED OUT

Newark Goes Dark In Test of Wartime Precaution.

NEWARK, N. J.—(AP)—Newark, a city of 437,000 persons, virtually was blotted from the map early today in a practice blackout as a defense against aerial attack.

The heart of the New Jersey metropolitan area of 2,500,000 inhabitants vanished suddenly into the darkness of night.

Here and there throughout business and industrial areas of Newark were scattered lights, but army and civilian observers flying over the city expressed general satisfaction.

"The blackout was so effective that army bombers flying at the usual height of 20,000 to 30,000 feet could not effectively hit any industrial or transportation target," said Major A. H. Horland of the army air corps.

Laval Upholds French Collaboration With Nazis, Urges America to Adopt Same Policy

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This dispatch is one of the most amazing to come out of the war. The man who helped bring about France's capitulation to Germany and who arranged for her to "collaborate" in defeat with her former enemy, explains his motivations and details his activities. By RALPH HEINZEN
(Copyright 1941, by United Press)

PARIS—Pierre Laval is talking:

"Last June, I watched powerless and broken-hearted, the swift, successive phases of our debacle.

"Even in the darkest hours, I never gave up hope for my country. I was guided solely by the desire to do everything possible to attempt to obtain for France the best possible peace after such a great defeat. All my subsequent acts were and continue to be inspired by that absorbing preoccupation.

"If I succeeded, I am sure it was because I went to the Germans as a peasant of France, determined to defend his soil but also determined to teach my fellow Frenchmen that France could regain her strength only in a unified, regenerated continent. I pleaded with all my soul the cause of France. I never faced the Germans with the spirit of a conquered man. I never humiliated myself. Because of the way I spoke, my interview with Hitler was a surprise to me. I had left Paris only with the idea of meeting Ribbentrop (Joachim Von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister). I talked with Hitler for two hours.

"I was able to speak with him freely and frankly because I had no responsibility in the sion to the Greeks, predicted calmly: "I think it will be possible to hold Crete."

In London, a British spokesman said fighting on the island Sunday was "quieter," but he cautioned Britons against thinking that "the German bolt was shot."

Dispatches from Rome said German troops had been landed on the island from ships protected by the Italian navy, convoyed through waters the British fleet had guarded.

The British acknowledged that a few sea-borne reinforcements might have landed, but said they were insignificant. It was recalled that last week a squadron of British cruisers and destroyers were reported to have intercepted an Italian-guarded convoy north of Crete, drowning 5,000 Germans and sinking at least 40 troop-laden boats.

The British, reporting the arrival of air-borne German tanks, said that Nazi aerial invaders were still holding the important Malemi airport, 10 miles from Canea, the Crete capital, and that heavy fighting raged in the British-held sectors of Retimo and Candia, in central Crete.

Authoritative British quarters disputed German claims of a solid hold on the western end of the island.

Long-range RAF warplanes, flying from North African desert airdromes, were reported to have entered the fight against Nazi aerial troop-carriers after RAF fighter planes had been withdrawn last week when Crete's few airfields were declared untenable against Nazi dive-bombing assaults.

Premier Mussolini's high command said Fascist planes were also engaged in the attack on Crete, repeatedly bombing and machine-gunning strongholds on the island.

In Berlin—capping a week-end which saw Britain's mighty 42,100-ton battle cruiser Hood blown to bits in a clash with German warships off Greenland, plus the dramatic flight of King George II of Greece from Crete to Egypt—Germany's Grand Admiral Erich Raeder warned that United States convoys to Britain would be an "open act of war and a bare, unprovoked attack."

Raeder described even the American patrol system as "aggressive" and declared that convoys of contraband protected by United States warships would be met by German naval guns if necessary.

The British public, meanwhile, demanded the destruction of the 35,000-ton battleship Bismark, German conqueror of the Hood, as a measure of repayment for the sinking of their $30,000,000 vessel and the loss of some 1,300 sailors and officers.

The British, announcing that the damaged Bismark still was being pursued, asserted that one German warcraft was struck by an aerial torpedo. The Germans countered with the claim that a British battleship of the new King George class also suffered damage.

King George II of Greece arrived safely in Egypt, from Crete, after a hard overland trip on foot and by mule and across bomber-swept waters on a British destroyer, with a dramatic story of his narrow escape from Nazi parachutists who landed practically in his backyard.

Signs of a break-up of the Iraq government were seen in Ankara. Reports of Arab rioting in Basra, of the flight of Premier Rashid Ali Al Gailani's family and of some of his ministers. There also were unconfirmed reports that Rashid Ali and his defense minister had been given Turkish visas and were expected there soon, perhaps today.

From Vichy came word that General Maxime Weygand, former generalissimo of the Allied forces and now Vichy's North African commander had voiced his approval of the Petain government's plan to collaborate with Germany.

In the Far East, Japanese soldiers battered down the doors of two warehouses in Haiphong, French Indo-China, and removed $10,000,000 worth of United States goods intended originally for Central Chinese government.

The Japanese charged that the two American companies holding the goods merely were blinds to cover the real Chinese owners.

Says Nazis Have Lost 10,000 in Crete

LONDON—(INS)—German losses in the strenuous campaign for possession of Crete were estimated at nearly 10,000 today as Nazi war planes landed a number of small tanks and the British apparently managed some slight reinforcement of their embattled garrisons.

Information that British marines and artillerymen are now engaged in the increasingly heavy fighting indicated that one or more British ships had landed a number of men, probably at some point on the southern coast outside the present area of hostilities.

out any possible change by the commission.

Porch said that he hoped to get the committee's definite view on the contract and would ask council to hold a caucus meeting later this week to find their opinion of it. The committee chairman also said that Ohio Public Service officials would probably be questioned before the committee acts on the ordinance.

Miller, who is also chairman of the finance committee, said that committee would meet following the utilities meeting. Chief items to be discussed will be Mayor William J. Locke's veto of a $5,000 appropriation for repairing the police and fire signal system, a request that the city sponsor a WPA housekeeping aid project which county commissioners have voted to drop, and another request for the appropriation of $1,000 for three new traffic lights.

SAYS CONVOYS 'OPEN WAR ACT'

stitution of an American convoy system would not scare off the German navy—which just reported sinking Britain's 42,100-ton battle cruiser Hood and damaging a new 35,000-ton King George class battleship—from "fulfilling its duty" in the Atlantic.

"Since the nature of cargoes of convoyed ships, according to American admissions, would be established from the very beginning as contraband," Admiral Raeder asserted, "resort to this type of convoy system would not be neutral in the sense of international or American treaties, but an open war act and a bare, unprovoked attack.

"German naval forces therefore would be justified in taking measures against these contraband carriers, according to the law of sea warfare, and would, by exercise of these rights, have to repulse with arms if necessary any hindrance—even against American warships."

He said he only could confirm a view which President Roosevelt expressed: "Convoys mean shooting."

The German navy chief spoke as bluntly of what he described as the "so-called patrol system." He said that because this "already amounts practically to support of the British enemy, we can only warn urgently against its extension."

He described the patrol as serving no defensive purpose, but actually as being a communication system for the British.

Metz, Plymouth, and Sherman Pressel of Shelby, both bruised, and two other passengers, not injured.

At Galion Gerald Young, 20, Galion R. D. 3 is in City hospital following an accident Saturday when his automobile ran into a freight train at the South street crossing.

Four stitches had to be taken to close an injury on his eyelid.

The Pennsylvania railroad's "Trail Blazer," roaring through Upper Sandusky at a speed estimated at 70 miles an hour by Engineer Dan Shepler, plowed through a Michigan-bound automobile, scattering mangled bodies and wreckage for seven blocks.

The bodies were so badly mangled, undertakers at first reported nine bodies were found. Further investigation disclosed, however, that what was counted as an extra ear actually was only part of one.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Nemeth of Richwood, with whom the party had spent Saturday night before starting the drive back to Michigan, confirmed that only eight persons were in the automobile when it left Richmond.

Other week-end fatalities:

The United Mine Workers (CIO) previously had set today as the deadline for the C. G. and E. firm to grant "the protection of a written contract" or face a strike. Albert Griffin, president of the UMW local, had charged discrimination.

New "work stoppages" were ordered in 28 Ohio sewer pipe plants to support demands of the AFL United Brick and Clay Workers of America for a closed shop, improved working conditions and higher wages.

Conferences are set for Tuesday at Canton in the sewer pipe factory dispute involving 2,500 workers. Mediation Board Opens Coal Hearings

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The national defense mediation board met with representatives of the United Mine Workers (CIO) and southern soft coal operators again today in an effort to avert shutdown of bituminous mines.

Having failed to bring union, northern and southern operators into agreement on a new contract, the board is conducting "fact finding" negotiations preparatory to drafting its recommendations for a settlement. It was indicated the recommendations—the board's final step in the controversy—would be ready for publication within a few days.

UMW President John L. Lewis has assured board officials that another stoppage, which would cut off fuel essential to defense industries, would not be called at least until the recommendations are made public.

CRESTLINE—Following a wiener roast at Hamilton's park recently, members of the Good Samaritan class of the Presbyterian Sunday school, their teacher, Mary Craig and Rev. and Mrs. Louis Swartz enjoyed a scavenger hunt.

American Vessel Finds Ambergris Worth 2 Million

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—(U.P.)—The American export liner Siboney, completing her last Atlantic trip in commercial service before becoming a United States army transport, arrived from Lisbon today with a probable fortune fished from mid-ocean—perhaps $2,000,000 worth of ambergris.

Capt. Wenzel Habel said he thought assays would identify the white 3-ton mass found floating 300 miles east of Bermuda as Ambergris, a valuable whale secretion used in perfume-making.

Representatives of a soap company told ship's officers that ambergris was worth $25 an ounce and that if the catch were all ambergris, it would probably be valued at $2,400,000—more than three times the reported value of the Siboney.

President Expected To Call For Increased Speed In Aid For Britain.

perienced since the retreat from Dunkirk last June.

The president has concealed his intentions regarding the neutrality act since Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox attacked the measure last week. But the most outspoken administration supporters in congress have joined the repeal chorus and a move to junk the legislation so that the United States can return to its traditional freedom of the seas policy may be made.

Wendell L. Willkie called upon the president last night to give a "forthright, courageous and revealing message that will unite Americans . . . and serve notice to totalitarian rulers everywhere that America intends to help stop aggressor powers and totalitarianism."

The committee to defend America by aiding the Allies, in a telegram signed by 3,000 persons, asked Mr. Roosevelt that his Tuesday speech "tell what we must do to insure the security of the United States by hastening the defeat of the aggressors." The signatories pledged their support for "strong action, even armed action."

Sen. George W. Norris, (Ind., Neb.) said he believed it would be a "good idea" to make available to Great Britain an additional number of U. S. warships for convoy duty in the North Atlantic to offset heavy British shipping losses and "help turn the tide against Hitler."

LAVAL UPHOLDS COLLABORATION WITH GERMANY

French Appeaser Urges U. S. To Adopt Same Policy In Interest of Peace.

declaration of the war whose unhappy ending I had feared and predicted.

"I was not afraid because I knew France is immortal and well able eventually to regain her place in the world But I had one obsession: to find a basis for discussion to establish a clear, understanding and frank friendship to terminate forever the tragic disputes which periodically had hurled us one against the other.

"'You can crush us; you are the stronger,' I told Hitler. 'You can, if you desire, punish us more; we can take it. But because it is a law of nature, we will one day revolt. During our history, you've whipped us. We've beaten you. Must this go on indefinitely? Can you agree to allow a tragic renewal of our conflicts at a date and under conditions which we cannot foresee? If you don't want that, if you take into consideration our past glory and our pride, if you consent not to touch our honor or our vital interests, then anything is possible.'

"And the chancellor replied: 'I will not make a peace of revenge. I will not fall into the errors of Versailles. But do you want to collaborate?'"

"Did I want to collaborate? It was because I did want to collaborate that I was there. That's why we were able to draft rapidly the broad outlines of a collaboration plan and agree on the capital fact that France in those conditions could, after peace, play a great role in the construction of a new Europe.

"It would be incorrect to say more now about those talks. What I can say is that neither then nor later was I ever asked to surrender anything which I would be forced to refuse in consideration of the interests I was then charged with defending. * * *

"Does that peace wherein I have hope and confidence, since I met Hitler, appear incompatible with the ides America has of France? I cannot believe that.

"It is, nevertheless, that peace and no other which collaboration must bring to my country. Would the United States want to push France into a contrary peace—a peace of destruction and division—by urging her to spurn the extended hand of Hitler—a hand extended in a gesture unique in history?

"And there's another thing. You don't seem to realize across the ocean that this isn't a war like other wars; it's a revolution from which a new Europe, rejuvenated, reorganized and prosperous, must come. Liberty will remain. Liberty cannot durably be menaced in a country from which the original ideas of liberty spread to the world.

"Democracy? If it's the same democracy we know, the democracy which caused us so much trouble and to which we owe our present collapse, we don't want it and we don't ask you to fight for that democracy. But we want a new republic, stronger, with better sinews, more reality, and we are determined to make such a republic.

"Those in my country who dream of returning to the old system make a great mistake. France does not want to and won't go backward. Along with all other nations of Europe, France must fulfill two tasks: build peace first of all, then avoid unemployment and disorders inherent in that condition, and build a new social system.

"That's the message I want to send to America. Does the United States really want to paralyze our nation on the road to national recovery? Is the United States going to delay the hour when France can step boldly forward to the future, by cruel, bloody intervention?

"In the rebuilding of Europe, you Americans can play a magnificent role. But you can do it only in peace. France may some day become the link between your continent and ours Trade with us must be resumed. We need much of your natural wealth and you need ours.

But you must understand France cannot fulfill the role of gangplank between the old world and the new unless she agrees to practice the policy of total collaboration with Germany."

Louisiana calls them "parishes" instead of "counties."

TWO RESIGN PASTORATES AT ASHLAND

Rev. A. H. Smith, Rev. Lentz Announce Resignations To Congregations Sunday.

ASHLAND—Both pastor and assistant pastor at the Trinity Lutheran church here announced their resignations Sunday to the congregation.

They are Rev. A. H. Smith, who has served as pastor for the 46 years and Rev. Harold H. Lentz. Both resignations become effective Sept. 1.

Rev. Smith, who is 74 has no immediate plans for the future. Rev. Lentz will accept the Dr. Tressler scholarship of Wittenberg college for men in graduate work. He will enter Yale divinity school in September.

Rev. Lentz has served as assistant pastor since July 1935.

Rev. Smith accepted the pastorate he is resigning June 1, 1891, after serving as supply pastor for little more than a year. He preached his first sermon in Woodville school, south of Mansfield, in 1889.

During the 46 years he has been in Ashland he has solemnized 939 marriages and has officiated at 1,315 funerals. On numerous occasions he has been speaker for baccalaureate and commencement services in schools here.

He was elected secretary of East Ohio Synod which he served from 1892 to 1894. From 1900 to 1902 he was president of East Ohio Synod; was secretary and treasurer of Board of Ministerial Education several years at two different intervals, was member of board of directors of Wittenberg College from 1896 to 1903 and again from 1910 to 1926 and secretary of the board from 1913 to 1924. In 1929 he was again a director and retained that position until 1938.

The United Lutheran Church in America selected him as executive board member to complete a term of Dr. V. G. A. Tressler. He was re-elected in 1926. He has been chairman of Committee on Women's Work and has been advisory representative to the Executive Board of Women's Missionary society.

Rev. Smith was born at Wapakoneta, Ohio, Jan. 25, 1867. He moved with his parents to Mansfield in the fall of 1872 where his father was pastor. It was in Mansfield that Dr. Smith received his high school education. When his father accepted the pastorate of the First Lutheran church at Springfield in 1883 he entered the preparatory school at Wittenberg and then the college where he graduated in 1888 with second honors. In May of 1891 he received the degree of B. D. from Wittenberg Theological Seminary, now known as the Hamma Divinity School. In June of 1891 he was given the degree of M. A. by Wittenberg and in 1910 received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity from Wittenberg college.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, MAY 26, 1941.

It's a good thing for the ready prophets these days that people are in too big a hurry to check on their accuracy.

Anyway, America's swinging back to normal as far as Thanksgiving day is concerned, and many a patriotic bosom rests easier.

American In Chicago

CHICAGO has come to be known in other parts of the country as the isolationist capital of the United States. Samuel Grafton, columnist of the New York Post, went there to find out how such a "solid rock of isolation" got that way. He found a city much like other cities of America.

> "Actually," wrote Grafton, "I found a worried, uncertain city, brooding over the problem, looking over its shoulder at Hitler precisely as any other metropolis in the country. Before I had been here three hours I had come upon so much hollering, bickering, rage and general confusion that I felt completely at home and certain this was just another American town."

For every prominent isolationist he found a prominent interventionist. For people believing in aid to England short of belligerency, he found others who would go the whole way, even to war. He found those who were sure England would not lose and those who believed she could not win, even with American aid. He found also that many Chicago boys had enlisted, without waiting to be drafted. He found Americans willing to boo the name of the president, and he found prominent men of German and Italian origin working hard for all-out aid to Great Britain and the defense of America.

The striking thing about the picture is the confusion and the violence with which opposing viewpoints are upheld. Is that really the American way?

There is certainly freedom of thought and speech, but there is no clear-eyed seeing straight to the instant need of things of which Kipling wrote. Such widespread mental confusion looks more like a symptom of dangerous disunity than the wholesome expression of differences with a united purpose.

No-Vacation Bonus

ANOTHER industrial innovation appears, under the stress of rearmament. The International Nickel company, which is the world's largest producer of nickel, asked about 2,000 employes in this country to accept a week's extra wages, in addition to regular pay, instead of taking the usual week's vacation. The need of finished nickel for armament is so pressing that any interruption or let-down in factory production will make a serious difference.

It wouldn't be surprising if many of our American-owned factories were to adopt the same policy this summer. There will be general interest in seeing how free labor takes to the idea. The vacationless double pay may be welcomed by many workers.

There are cases already reported of men voluntarily continuing in extra shifts when they have already done their day's work. This is mainly, of course, for the sake of the additional earnings; but doubtless some of it must be credited to patriotism, too.

Stimulated Invention

GLASS will be adapted to many new uses, as military needs stop the use of metals for civilian purposes.

"I have seen a glass toaster," says an official of the General Electric company, "in which you can actually see the bread turning from white to golden brown." There is also a glass iron which will produce a smoother surface on ironed goods than today's irons do. These suggest only a part of what is already in view.

Design and production of such things apparently will thrive as more familiar objects and materials are absorbed in defense priorities. It used to be easy to laugh at "ersatz" products. Today we begin to realize that many of them are not temporary substitutes, but permanent additions to our economy. It is a humbling fact that we might never have developed many of the new, improved products now coming to the fore had not war in another part of the world brought about a shortage of products to which we have long been accustomed.

Wheels And Legs

AUTOMOBILES and people are a good deal alike. They have, broadly speaking, about the same powers, purposes and functions, even though the cars run on wheels and the human beings happen to hobble along on prongs which in many ways are inferior to wheels.

They both require nourishment in about the same way, to provide power for motion and work. And their functions are curiously similar, although, surprisingly enough, so intelligent a mechanism as a car has no power of decision or voluntary motion. It is a slave, whose owner must take care of it and feed it and mend it and nurse it when it's ailing.

So comes the curious fact that a car owner often takes better care of his mechanical slave than he takes of himself. He studies how to keep the little old car going, and gives it the right kind of food and oil, and keeps it carefully shod and shined and housed and everything.

And all the time he may be pouring into his own tank a lot of harmful junk, and driving himself too fast, and running off the road, and letting his driving lights go dim, and his chassis get loose and creaky, and his battery run down, and his spark plugs full of carbon, and so on. And first thing he knows, he's about ready for the junk heap.

The Task of the World

WINSTON CHURCHILL says in his book, "Blood, Sweat and Tears":

"Civilization will not last, freedom will not survive, peace will not be kept, unless a very large majority of mankind unite together and defend them and show themselves possessed of a constabulary power before which barbaric and atavistic forces will stand in awe.

"Here, then, we see the task that should command the exertions of the rising generation, which may bring the surge of a new impulse toward the organization of a world peace, and across the gulf of these eventful years prepare and bring nearer the brotherhood of man."

It is charged that the American people had no opportunity last November to vote on the issue of war. Literally, that's true. There were no ballots bearing the words "For War" and "Opposed to War." But the political parties, supposedly with their ears to the ground, named the candidates they believed best represented what the voters wanted, and the voters did the rest.

Let's Look Around

Albuquerque's Big Army Air Field

—By G. J. KOCHENDERFER

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—It is unlikely that a better idea of the immensity of Uncle Sam's military preparations could be gained at any single spot than by taking a look at the tremendous army aviation post that is being developed here—with a speed almost equalling the magic of Aladdin's wonderful lamp.

Supplementing the 888 acres developed as a municipal airport, the army post spreads out over indeterminate additional acreage, on which more than one hundred buildings have already been erected to meet administrative needs and to provide barracks, messes and recreational quarters for the men stationed here.

Layout of grounds to allow for 12 miles of hard-surfaced runways for the training planes and big bombers which will be stationed here only indicates the size of the flying field—an open space that could scarcely be available in any section other than this mammoth southwest with its countless square miles of waste land.

While the commercial airport continues open to the public as heretofore, and TWA airliners will maintain their regular schedules, entrance to the army post is restricted to workers on the project and officers and men assigned to duty on the field.

With all the work that has been done since last January, when the project was started, there is still much to do and on the day of our visit the temporary roads which extend many miles over the flat mesa had been made so muddy by a night's rain that an army car, of station wagon type, was deemed more suitable for a trip around the field than the one that had brought us 1,800 miles to have a look.

It was Lieut. R. G. LeCompte, public relations officer (one-time student at Oberlin) who took time to show us around, and to apologize for the somewhat unfinished appearance of things.

Just outside the corps area is a federal housing development, in the low rental range and intended for occupancy by non-commissioned officers. At least a hundred homes have been completed and work is moving along into the second hundred, with more to follow.

Seeing this flying field as it now is, and visualizing what it is to become within another few months, belief is strengthened that the United States government is taking a realistic view of the need for adequate preparedness in the air.

JUST too late to see an Indian school in session, as the term closed a week ago, there was still time to learn something about the high school for Indian children, which the Indian bureau of the department of interior maintains in Albuquerque.

Here Indian children of a half dozen different tribes are enabled to carry through studies from the seventh to the twelfth grades and present enrollment is 600, including Pueblos living in New Mexico, Navajos from Arizona, Apaches from both of these states, a few Utes from Colorado and some Oklahoma Indian children.

For the Indian boys special attention is given to preparation for agriculture, with opportunities also offered for training in the arts and handcrafts peculiar to the various tribes represented. Home economics is a favorite study among the Indian girls in the school.

Primary education, through the sixth grade, is gained in the schools maintained by the government in each of New Mexico's 19 Indian villages. College education is also made available to high school graduates who meet the requirements for advanced schooling.

ALBUQUERQUE, old and new, is a city that is well worth keeping in mind. It is so nearly Mansfield's size that a comparison is interesting.

But what's this we hear about, a little further west—it seems like there's another place to see.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Thursday, May 26, 1921.

Mansfield General hospital trustees refused to accept the resignation of the president, superintendent and hospital board members following public reaction to organization plans.

Floyd Dent arrived home after a week's training course in Boy Scout camp work at Culver, Ind.

Contracts were let for a number of bridges and culverts in the county.

Pre-nuptial parties were being given for Miss Carolyn McFarland, bride-elect of Martin Bushnell.

FIVE YEARS AGO TODAY

Tuesday, May 26, 1936.

School board officials proposed transfer of H. J. Dotson, Bowman school principal, to John Simpson.

J. Leo Hartmann was elected to the advisory board of Ashland college.

Eleanor Hancock and Eleanor Renwick, Mansfield pianists, played at Rotary club meeting.

Jack Snyder was elected president of the Senior Hi-Y club.

Westbrook Country Club opened season.

TODAY IN HISTORY

May 26—Gen. E. Kirby Smith of the Confederate forces, surrendered the last army of the Confederacy, numbering 18,000, to Union General E. R. Canby near Brazos, Texas, on May 26, 1865. This marked the close of the war.

Health and Diet

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I HAVE been told of a patient with a peculiar blood disease, hemophilia. These patients are called "bleeders" because the blood does not coagulate and bleeding continues from slight cuts and abrasions for an indefinite and dangerous period.

I happen to be partially involved in attempting to trace the family history of the patient mentioned above. It is astonishing how difficult such a task is, and how little people know about their hereditary diseases. We sent out hundreds of letters to close relatives. We interviewed an old grandmother, 89, who would answer questions for a while, and then turn stubborn.

People are inclined to believe that a knowledge of their hereditary diseases has no practical value. Some ancestor bequeaths them this condition, and there is nothing to do about it.

Recently, however, I was made acquainted with a peculiar case in which the knowledge of an hereditary condition may have meant the difference between imprisonment and even possibly death as a military punishment.

Thomsen's Disease.

The condition in question is known as Thomsen's disease. The man who first described it was himself a victim of the condition. It is a peculiar change in the muscles and consists in difficulty in initiating or stopping voluntary motion. You start to shake hands with the patient with this condition and he cannot raise his hand quickly enough to meet you; but when he finally clasps the hand, he continues to hold it indefinitely both to his and to your embarrassment.

The individual about whom I heard was drafted in the army and perhaps on account of the nervous excitement, the condition began to affect him badly while drilling. The order would be given to march forward and he would not start until the rest of his company was ten or fifteen paces ahead. Then he would come on rapidly, catch up with the company, but when the order came to halt, he would march on ten or twenty paces forward. He was considered insubordinate by the military authorities. He had been placed in the guard house when a medical officer recognized the condition (it is very rare) and saved him from an unjust punishment.

Concealed Defect.

This case is curiously reminiscent of Thomsen himself, whose son had enlisted in the army and was about to be punished for malingering by the military authorities because he had not, as the officers thought, obeyed an order promptly. The father had concealed his defect by never making any sudden move and by concentrating for some moments before he made any motion.

He came forward and convinced the military authorities that his son was suffering from a condition which he could not prevent, and not from deliberate insubordination.

I feel that a thorough knowledge of our family histories may often be very comforting to us, as well as practically helpful.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Service Hostility to OPM Cuts Defense Production Efficiency

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—It never leaks out into the open, but one of the most serious hitches in the defense program is the caste-minded hostility of army and navy brasshats toward the civilian OPM.

The military resent the civilian defense officials and seldom miss a chance to "nick" them. Result of this undercover antipathy is a constant state of strained relations which naturally hampers results.

Illustrative of the army-navy attitude was the coup of navy brasshats in sneaking an amendment into the priorities bill while it was in the house of representatives, making them, in effect, masters of the OPM. It required direct administration intervention to kill this scheme in the senate.

A later case is the issue of sub-contracting, one of the most serious problems facing defense chiefs.

There are thousands of plants all over the country able and eager to make parts for defense orders. An effective system of sub-contracting utilizing these unused production facilities would tremendously increase both the speed and volume of armament output. But many primary contractors balk at sub-contracting, and the brass-hats side with them.

Finally forcing a showdown, OPM Associate Director Sidney Hillman demanded an OPM ruling that all big Army contracts contain mandatory sub-contracting clauses.

Procurement Reform.

OPM chiefs agreed to this and named a subcommittee, consisting of Hillman, Knudsen, Production Director Biggers, Priorities Director Stettinius, and Purchasing Chief Nelson. They are working out a concrete plan on the proportion of sub-contracting to be required, but while they are doing this, Army procurement chiefs are secretly doing everything they can to scuttle the program.

Likewise they are busy sniping at a bill to concentrate all defense procurement in a single independent agency, instead of scattering it among a score of bureaus. This reform long has been urged by business experts to eliminate overlapping, red-tape, duplication and other bureaucratic evils.

Of course, such an agency would mean the elimination of numerous brasshats and their multitudinous staffs, and as in all entrenched bureaucracies, self-preservation comes first.

Note—OPM insiders place much of the blame for the delay in placing urgent defense orders on Amry procurement chiefs, whom they charge with not being big enough to handle the tremendous jobs thrust on them.

Spontaneous Aid.

If Mayor LaGuardia runs short of ideas on how to keep the Office of Civilian Defense going at top speed, he can get some pointers from his chief in the White House.

Keenly interested in enabling every man, woman and child to "play a part," no matter how small, in the defense program, Roosevelt feels that the big flaw so far has been that the average person has not been made to "feel" that he can contribute something.

Discussing this with Defense advisers the other day, the President remarked that one of the best ways to stimulate civilian participation in preparedness was the organization of movements such as "Bundles for Britain."

"Bundles for Britain was an excellent idea," he said, "because it made people realize that in helping the British they were also making a contribution to our own defense. But it is only a start. Other movements of a similar nature should be encouraged. Why not Binoculars for Britain, also?"

To illustrate his point, the President related how in the World war, when he was Assistant Secretary of Navy, it was announced that the Navy needed more binoculars than American factories were producing. In a few weeks thousands of binoculars poured in from patriotic donors all over the country.

"Some weren't suitable to our needs, but a great many were," said the President. "However, it wasn't the material value of the gifts that counted so much as the spirit behind them. That's what impressed me more than anything—the spontaneous desire of civilians everywhere to help when they thought they could be of service."

New "Dolly Gann" War.

It has been a long, long time since Dolly Gann and Alice Roosevelt Longworth staged their great social war over who should come into dinner first. But the seeds planted by that war are sprouting even today.

Latest to raise the precedence issue was Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, wife of the Political Adviser of the State Department. She was attending a dinner given by the former French military attache, Colonel Emmanuel Lombard, and his attractive wife, who had seated Mrs. Hornbeck at the left of the host. At the host's right and in the No. 1 place of honor sat Mrs. Wallace Murray, whose husband is Chief of the State Department's Near Eastern Division.

To the average citizen of Kalamazoo or Kankakee there is no great difference between the official ranks of the State Department's Adviser on Political Relations and its Chief of the Division of Near Eastern Affairs. Geographically, of course, there is a big difference. Dr. Hornbeck is a specialist on China and the Far East, while Wallace Murray is a specialist on Turkey, Egypt and the Near East.

A lot of people don't bother about these technicalities, but to the practised social eye, Dr. Hornbeck, as Political Adviser, ranks ahead of Mr. Murray as Division Chief.

Mrs. Hornbeck is one of those with a practised social eye. And no sooner did she see that she was on the left of her host, with Mrs. Murray on his right, than she said in a voice which the whole table could hear: "Everyone makes mistakes, my dear, even as thee and me."

"What was that?" asked Madame Lombard, worried by Mrs. Hornbeck's indignant eye, but not comprehending the "terrible faux pas."

"I said, everyone makes mistakes, my dear, even as thee and me. I just wanted to call your attention, Helen, to the fact that I outrank Mrs. Murray on every occasion."

Dinner guests gasped, then hastily covered the confusion. Shortly after coffee was served, Mrs. Hornbeck departed.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Answering the mail orders:

Mrs. C. L., Waterbury, N. J.—The first American ace was Raoul Lufbery, who, according to early World war recorders, "destroyed more than 40 German airplanes, but only got credit for 17 official victories, because most of his combats were so far in enemy territory that French army observers could not officially record them." Lufbery was a graduate of the Lafayette Escadrille and one of the first members of the First pursuit squadron, A.E.F. He was shot down in aerial combat in May, 1918.

T. K., Pekin, Ill.—The reason you haven't heard more about the airmail pickup system which I wrote about several months ago is that the government is not licensing any more of these companies feeding airmail to the grass-roots until the airmail rate case of the pioneer company, All-American Aviation, Inc., is decided by the Civil Aeronautics board. The hearings still are going on. All-American is now servicing about 108 small communities in six states with non-stop airmail service. But nine other companies, servicing 1,300 communities in 29 states over a flying area of 22,000 miles have license applications pending. The All-American hearings should be concluded shortly and if the CAB should rule that licenses should be granted to all or most of these firms, there will be a rapid expansion of airmail service.

Mrs. N. D. L., Iowa City, Iowa—There are 30,051 Civilian Conservation corps boys studying in defense classes now. Classes include auto mechanics, wood working, metal working, electricity, radio, aviation mechanics, welding, cooking and baking. If your son is particularly interested in any of these subjects, it would be well to make that clear to CCC officials so he may be sent to a camp where that particular trade is being taught.

M. R. T., Beaumont, Tex.—There are 362 colleges and universities (or about one in three in the entire program) that now give credits for courses taken under the civilian pilots training program. CPT officials say they expect the number will be increased next fall, as the program just got into full swing this year. Letters to the colleges or universities you would like to attend should bring information as to whether credits on a degree for CPT courses are allowed there and to what extent.

Miss E. W., Lansing, Mich.—The bureau of labor statistics says living costs are just 2.6 per cent higher now than in the month before the present war started, August, 1939. During the World war the c. of l. went about 50 per cent higher than today. At present living costs generally are a little below the five-year 1935-39 level. Some observers here believe that they will go to that level but not much above it without drawing fire from Leon Henderson's office of price administration and civilian supply.

William Cooper Howells, father of William Dean Howells, the novelist and writer, was a migratory, anti-slavery journalist in Ohio, and had little to share with his cherished second son but a scant dole of bread, high principle, a buoyant humor, and a liking and capacity for letters.

The father was of Welsh extraction, whose flannel-making ancestors followed their products to America. They wandered and ventured for two generations until the novelist's father finally settled in Ohio.

Howells edited or published papers at Hamilton, Dayton, Xenia, and Martins Ferry, where, in 1837, the author was born.

A Farmer's Diary

The Common Crab

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

ALONG the edge of our calamus swamp and inland many feet, where the water table is high, are numerous holes. The smaller ones are less than the size of a man's thumb, the larger openings measure an inch across. Sometimes they enter the bank perpendicularly; often they slant at different angles. Always, it seems, the earth is not deposited around the aperture, but at one side. In lower ground, the dirt removed mixes with water and forms a sticky mass which dries in the sun as hard as Egyptian bricks. On higher ground, the excavated dirt is light and aerated.

To find the maker of these holes, I have taken a shovel and spaded up the soil. But he was elusive and retreated into the water that seemed to underlie the softened grainy subsoil.

But only two weeks ago, walking south toward Honey Creek, I suddenly came upon the creature I had hunted long—and saw him scurry into his hole. It was the common crab—we used to call them "crawdads"—that had fled from the stream and taken up his hermitage beneath the sod.

The riddle became clearer. How many times, as a boy, have I seen a crab zip beneath a stone near the bank and when I turned it over he was gone! The wary creature had a dugout through the bank that penetrated, perhaps, far into the nearest field.

One moonlit night last week I stood on the moist ground beside the pond and heard peculiar rustlings through the dewy grass of the lawn. I thought it must be newly developed frogs, until I grabbed one that rushed by my toe and to my surprise found I held a wriggling crab. They are natural scavengers, who eat worms or insects alive or dead, or feast upon microscopic animals of the soil. Tender plants, too, serve as a source of food.

In the south, I learn, they root out young cotton from the fields and all along the levees—built to keep the rivers from overflowing when spring rains come—they burrow through by the millions and make openings far out upon the level land. When the rivers rise, this fifth column has worked so that water comes spouting out, like little springs and all the Dutch boys in the world would not have thumbs enough to stop the flow.

Their enemies are the skunk, opossum, the king bird, the king fisher—and man. The white meat of the crab's tail makes excellent bait for fishing.

Love—By Trial and Error

By Kathrn Bemis (Copyright, 1941)

CHAPTER XVIII.

She sat there staring into space so long that dawn came and she could hear the rumble of the early traffic. The milkman came through the hall, rattling the morning milk bottles. She shook herself upright.

Automatically, she opened her door and took in her pint of milk.

She dragged herself out to the kitchenette and absent-mindedly put the bottle on top of the electric refrigerator instead within it.

She finally managed to take off her clothes, let down her bed and crawl into it.

She tried to close nervous eyes, but they felt like big hard marbles, too big for their lids.

She lay awake until sunshine streamed steadily through the cotton window curtains, her brain visualizing the quick flame in Bill Anderson's hazel eyes when he told her last night that he loved her. She saw the barren years stretching ahead without that love and felt as if she could not go on living.

Love was the biggest thing in the world, and not worldly success, as Bill apparently thought. What sort of husband would he make Rosalind unless he could love her?

She attempted again to put all this from her mind, but her thoughts went on madly racing and she could not control them. She and Bill—lost to each other forever! Bill plainly showing last night how terribly upset he was over her engagement to Rex—yet expecting her to accept without protest his engagement to another woman.

Oh, she was thankful that Rex was taking her far away so soon after the wedding ceremony! She'd be in Hollywood—so far from Bill Anderson, she'd never have to hear or think of him again. Or—if she did think of him, no one would ever know and, perhaps in time, this horrid torture called love would fade entirely away. Time, it was said, cured nearly everything.

FINALLY, from sheer exhaustion, Raye slept and dreamed of Bill and Rex. She saw them fighting a desperate duel—Bill, the redcoated officer, Rex, the distinguished-looking ambassador of last night's costume ball. Rex raised his sword and was lunging toward Bill's heart when she awoke screaming.

She sat up in bed and rubbed her eyes open with clenched fists. She felt unbearably restless, even more so than last night.

Resolutely, she went into the bathroom, drew a tub of hot water and into it generously sprinkled fragrant bath salts she had brought from Paris in her better days.

She sat a long time in the soothing bath and a new courage began flowing through her whole body. Rex had insisted that hereafter she would not be needed in his office, so now she had all the time in the world to waste. She had nearly finished the business college course and, anyway, she would probably never need to use it. She was going to be the wife of a famous Hollywood scenario writer.

She tried to cuddle this thought pleasantly in her mind. She would live a highly exciting life in the picture colony, call the biggest stars by their given names. Rex knew them all intimately and naturally the majority of his friends were actors, writers, composers, agents and directors, all famous in their respective lines.

Yes, it was going to be a glittering life to lead. Perhaps even more so than the social whirl she had moved in up to a short while ago. Now of course many of her old friends were treating her a trifle indifferently. Perhaps because she couldn't return their lavish entertainment. Perhaps they forgot what lavish entertainment she had provided for them in the past. Not that she minded, she hastily tried to assure herself. They hadn't been real friends, that's all. Perhaps you didn't have friends in quantity unless you could give as well as take. Perhaps you were voted more or less of a dud unless you could keep up your end.

But the hurt of this—and sometimes it had hurt—would soon be over with. She was going to marry Rex and be in such a gay whirl out on the coast that all her old friends would be green with envy.

Somehow, though, even this was little satisfaction to her now.

She decided to go shopping for a few inexpensive necessities she would need for Monday's journey. And that ceremony took—perhaps ten minutes—perhaps less. She shivered. Then she told herself that she was acting perfectly silly. She had made up her mind, hadn't she?

She was dressed at last in her plain black suit and hat, a white lawn blouse crisply dainty under her coat.

She grabbed up her black handbag and opened the door. She started violently.

"Oh!" she exclaimed. "How you frightened me!"

The uniformed messenger boy grinned and held out a telegram. "Sorry, ma'am," he said. "Please sign here."

She signed his book on the line he indicated, a forbidding of evil clutching her.

She closed the door and turned the yellow envelope over and over in her hand, dreading to open it.

When she did, she decided her hunch had been correct. Aunt Susan was not only arriving in town—she was coming, she wired, to live with her niece!

What a complication! Raye wondered what to do. Aunt Susan, who had deserted her and then was unable to support herself, had at this inopportune time decided to take potluck with the only person in the world who would never turn her away. One couldn't leave one's own aunt in the lurch—neither did one like to saddle a husband with an unappreciative spendthrift like auntie!

Raye nervously tossed the telegram on a table and stood in the middle of the room trying to find some solution to this new problem. But there didn't seem to be any.

Auntie, who had forgotten how to economize—auntie who would require more petting, entertaining and allowance than any other human being on earth that Raye could think of! She would make Rex and his bride perfectly miserable. One couldn't start a successful marriage on so dangerous a basis.

Raye sighed and went over to the telephone. It might take days to settle auntie amicably for all concerned. It might even be better to postpone the wedding.

Raye called Rex's office.

"Rex—I've bad news."

"Darling—what's happened?" His anxiety was loverlike.

Raye told him quickly. "We cant be married Monday. Aunt Susan is arriving on the noon train."

"Is that all? You had me scared," Rex said, in a relieved voice. "We should have at least one relative at our wedding, dear. I can't see why her presence should complicate matters—unless she doesn't approve of me."

"On the contrary, she's rather crazy about you. But she's in a very unsettled state of mind. I'll have to see that she gets a situation. She has to earn a living and . . ."

"Why bother?" Rex's laugh was careless. "She can live with us, can't she? Or we'll fix her up with a little apartment near us."

"I'm—I'm afraid that wouldn't work."

Raye wanted to add, "You don't know auntie," but she refrained.

She knew how decidedly out of place auntie would be in any harmonious household—auntie with her set opinions about everything in general. Hollywood would horify her. Also, her extravagances would know no bounds if she thought a high-salaried man like Rex was standing by to pass out checks. Auntie and her coming here—auntie was impediment enough to make a marriage go on the rocks before it got fairly under way. There must be some other way. There had to be.

"But darling—it's foolish to allow her to interfere with our plans!"

"I'm sorry, Rex—but I don't think so."

"Oh, come now! Theres nothing to it! We'll meet her train, take her to lunch and plan a darn nice future for her—comfortable, you know."

"We-ll—all right," came slowly from Raye, who wondered now if she hadn't been snatching a little too eagerly at a loophole of escape. Of course it was to late now to back out of marrying Rex. She'd have to go through with it.

As if he sensed what was running through her mind, Rex said, "Cheer up, sweetheart. I'm not letting you off at this late hour. Nothing can change our plans for Monday, darling. Or—am I assuming too much?"

"I've—I've promised, Rex," she faltered, her heart heavy. "I always try to—to keep promises.'

And this was Saturday! Only a few hours—from Monday!

"Then I'll see you within an hour? I'd come after you, but I'm up to my eyebrows in work. You'll see a terrific mess down here." His voice had a happy ring that made Raye feel nearly guilty. If she could only love him!

"I'll be there, Rex," she told him quickly and hung up.

She stood tautly, pressing her black-gloved fingers hard against her throbbing temples.

Finally she shook herself into a semblance of courage, tucked her handbag under her arm and went out into the cool, bracing morning air.

She rode a streetcar into the downtown district, unmindful of the admiring glances of nearby passengers, any of whom would have given a great deal to be so young and beautiful.

The car swung quickly past parks strewn with dry leaves and petals, flower beds looking starkly naked, with the exception of canna circles which arrogantly flaunted their crimson heads as if in defiance to on-coming frost.

A slight shiver ran thraugh Raye and she wondered where exactly she would be the middle of next winter. Perhaps it would be pleasant once more to exchange sunshine for sharp wind and snow. She and Aunt Susan had done it in the old care-free days. She had thought it fun then. Now-nothing could ever again warm her heart.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, MAY 26, 1941.

It's a good thing for the ready prophets these days that people are in too big a hurry to check on their accuracy.

Anyway, America's swinging back to normal as far as Thanksgiving day is concerned, and many a patriotic bosom rests easier.

American In Chicago

CHICAGO has come to be known in other parts of the country as the isolationist capital of the United States. Samuel Grafton, columnist of the New York Post, went there to find out how such a "solid rock of isolation" got that way. He found a city much like other cities of America.

"Actually," wrote Grafton, "I found a worried, uncertain city, brooding over the problem, looking over its shoulder at Hitler precisely as any other metropolis in the country. Before I had been here three hours I had come upon so much hollering, bickering, rage and general confusion that I felt completely at home and certain this was just another American town."

For every prominent isolationist he found a prominent interventionist. For people believing in aid to England short of belligerency, he found others who would go the whole way, even to war. He found those who were sure England would not lose and those who believed she could not win, even with American aid. He found also that many Chicago boys had enlisted, without waiting to be drafted. He found Americans willing to boo the name of the president, and he found prominent men of German and Italian origin working hard for all-out aid to Great Britain and the defense of America.

The striking thing about the picture is the confusion and the violence with which opposing viewpoints are upheld. Is that really the American way?

There is certainly freedom of thought and speech, but there is no clear-eyed seeing straight to the instant need of things of which Kipling wrote. Such widespread mental confusion looks more like a symptom of dangerous disunity than the wholesome expression of differences with a united purpose.

No-Vacation Bonus

ANOTHER industrial innovation appears, under the stress of rearmament. The International Nickel company, which is the world's largest producer of nickel, asked about 2,000 employes in this country to accept a week's extra wages, in addition to regular pay, instead of taking the usual week's vacation. The need of finished nickel for armament is so pressing that any interruption or let-down in factory production will make a serious difference.

It wouldn't be surprising if many of our American-owned factories were to adopt the same policy this summer. There will be general interest in seeing how free labor takes to the idea. The vacationless double pay may be welcomed by many workers.

There are cases already reported of men voluntarily continuing in extra shifts when they have already done their day's work. This is mainly, of course, for the sake of the additional earnings; but doubtless some of it must be credited to patriotism, too.

Stimulated Invention

GLASS will be adapted to many new uses, as military needs stop the use of metals for civilian purposes.

"I have seen a glass toaster," says an official of the General Electric company, "in which you can actually see the bread turning from white to golden brown." There is also a glass iron which will produce a smoother surface on ironed goods than today's irons do. These suggest only a part of what is already in view.

Design and production of such things apparently will thrive as more familiar objects and materials are absorbed in defense priorities. It used to be easy to laugh at "ersatz" products. Today we begin to realize that many of them are not temporary substitutes, but permanent additions to our economy. It is a humbling fact that we might never have developed many of the new, improved products now coming to the fore had not war in another part of the world brought about a shortage of products to which we have long been accustomed.

Wheels And Legs

AUTOMOBILES and people are a good deal alike. They have, broadly speaking, about the same powers, purposes and functions, even though the cars run on wheels and the human beings happen to hobble along on prongs which in many ways are inferior to wheels.

They both require nourishment in about the same way, to provide power for motion and work. And their functions are curiously similar, although, surprisingly enough, so intelligent a mechanism as a car has no power of decision or voluntary motion. It is a slave, whose owner must take care of it and feed it and mend it and nurse it when it's ailing.

So comes the curious fact that a car owner often takes better care of his mechanical slave than he takes of himself. He studies how to keep the little old car going, and gives it the right kind of food and oil, and keeps it carefully shod and shined and housed and everything.

And all the time he may be pouring into his own tank a lot of harmful junk, and driving himself too fast, and running off the road, and letting his driving lights go dim, and his chassis get loose and creaky, and his battery run down, and his spark plugs full of carbon, and so on. And first thing he knows, he's about ready for the junk heap.

The Task of the World

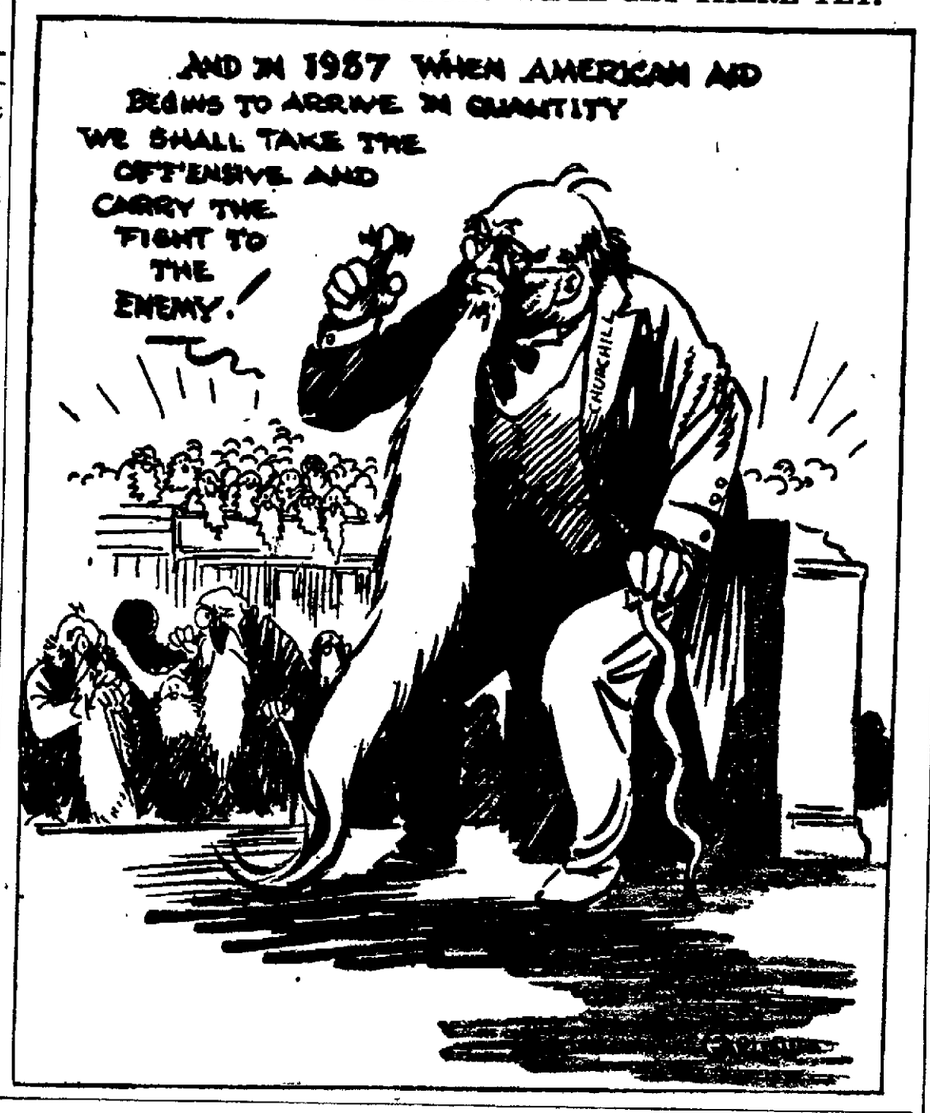
WINSTON CHURCHILL says in his book, "Blood, Sweat and Tears":

"Civilization will not last, freedom will not survive, peace will not be kept, unless a very large majority of mankind unite together and defend them and show themselves possessed of a constabulary power before which barbaric and atavistic forces will stand in awe.

"Here, then, we see the task that should command the exertions of the rising generation, which may bring the surge of a new impulse toward the organization of a world peace, and across the gulf of these eventful years prepare and bring nearer the brotherhood of man."

It is charged that the American people had no opportunity last November to vote on the issue of war. Literally, that's true. There were no ballots bearing the words "For War" and "Opposed to War." But the political parties, supposedly with their ears to the ground, named the candidates they believed best represented what the voters wanted, and the voters did the rest.

STAY WITH 'EM WINSTON! WE'LL GET THERE YET.



AND IN 1957 WHEN AMERICAN AID BEGINS TO ARRIVE IN QUANTITY WE SHALL TAKE THE OFFENSIVE AND CARRY THE FIGHT TO THE ENEMY!
CHURCHILL

Let's Look Around

Albuquerque's Big Army Air Field

—By G. J. KOCHENDERFER

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—It is unlikely that a better idea of the immensity of Uncle Sam's military preparations could be gained at any single spot than by taking a look at the tremendous army aviation post that is being developed here—with a speed almost equalling the magic of Aladdin's wonderful lamp.

Supplementing the 888 acres developed as a municipal airport, the army post spreads out over indeterminate additional acreage, on which more than one hundred buildings have already been erected to meet administrative needs and to provide barracks, messes and recreational quarters for the men stationed here.

Layout of grounds to allow for 12 miles of hard-surfaced runways for the training planes and big bombers which will be stationed here only indicates the size of the flying field—an open space that could scarcely be available in any section other than this mammoth southwest with its countless square miles of waste land.

While the commercial airport continues open to the public as heretofore, and TWA airliners will maintain their regular schedules, entrance to the army post is restricted to workers on the project and officers and men assigned to duty on the field.

With all the work that has been done since last January, when the project was started, there is still much to do and on the day of our visit the temporary roads which extend many miles over the flat mesa had been made so muddy by a night's rain that an army car, of station wagon type, was deemed more suitable for a trip around the field than the one that had brought us 1,800 miles to have a look.

It was Lieut. R. G. LeCompte, public relations officer (one-time student at Oberlin) who took time to show us around, and to apologize for the somewhat unfinished appearance of things.

Just outside the corps area is a federal housing development, in the low rental range and intended for occupancy by non-commissioned officers. At least a hundred homes have been completed and work is moving along into the second hundred, with more to follow.

Seeing this flying field as it now is, and visualizing what it is to become within another few months, belief is strengthened that the United States government is taking a realistic view of the need for adequate preparedness in the air.

JUST too late to see an Indian school in session, as the term closed a week ago, there was still time to learn something about the high school for Indian children, which the Indian bureau of the department of interior maintains in Albuquerque.

Here Indian children of a half dozen different tribes are enabled to carry through studies from the seventh to the twelfth grades and present enrollment is 600, including Pueblos living in New Mexico, Navajos from Arizona, Apaches from both of these states, a few Utes from Colorado and some Oklahoma Indian children.

For the Indian boys special attention is given to preparation for agriculture, with opportunities also offered for training in the arts and handcrafts peculiar to the various tribes represented. Home economics is a favorite study among the Indian girls in the school.

Primary education, through the sixth grade, is gained in the schools maintained by the government in each of New Mexico's 19 Indian villages. College education is also made available to high school graduates who meet the requirements for advanced schooling.

ALBUQUERQUE, old and new, is a city that is well worth keeping in mind. It is so nearly Mansfield's size that a comparison is interesting.

But what's this we hear about, a little further west—it seems like there's another place to see.

Health and Diet

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I HAVE been told of a patient with a peculiar blood disease, hemophilia. These patients are called "bleeders" because the blood does not coagulate and bleeding continues from slight cuts and abrasions for an indefinite and dangerous period.

I happen to be partially involved in attempting to trace the family history of the patient mentioned above. It is astonishing how difficult such a task is, and how little people know about their hereditary diseases. We sent out hundreds of letters to close relatives. We interviewed an old grandmother, 89, who would answer questions for a while, and then turn stubborn.

People are inclined to believe that a knowledge of their hereditary diseases has no practical value. Some ancestor bequeaths them this condition, and there is nothing to do about it.

Recently, however, I was made acquainted with a peculiar case in which the knowledge of an hereditary condition may have meant the difference between imprisonment and even possibly death as a military punishment.

Thomsen's Disease.

The condition in question is known as Thomsen's disease. The man who first described it was himself a victim of the condition. It is a peculiar change in the muscles and consists in difficulty in initiating or stopping voluntary motion. You start to shake hands with the patient with this condition and he cannot raise his hand quickly enough to meet you; but when he finally clasps the hand, he continues to hold it indefinitely both to his and to your embarrassment.

The individual about whom I heard was drafted in the army and perhaps on account of the nervous excitement, the condition began to affect him badly while drilling. The order would be given to march forward and he would not start until the rest of his company was ten or fifteen paces ahead. Then he would come on rapidly, catch up with the company, but when the order came to halt, he would march on ten or twenty paces forward. He was considered insubordinate by the military authorities. He had been placed in the guard house when a medical officer recognized the condition (it is very rare) and saved him from an unjust punishment.

Concealed Defect.

This case is curiously reminiscent of Thomsen himself, whose son had enlisted in the army and was about to be punished for malingering by the military authorities because he had not, as the officers thought, obeyed an order promptly. The father had concealed his defect by never making any sudden move and by concentrating for some moments before he made any motion.

He came forward and convinced the military authorities that his son was suffering from a condition which he could not prevent, and not from deliberate insubordination.

I feel that a thorough knowledge of our family histories may often be very comforting to us, as well as practically helpful.

Service Hostility to OPM Cuts Defense Production Efficiency

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—It never leaks out into the open, but one of the most serious hitches in the defense program is the caste-minded hostility of army and navy brasshats toward the civilian OPM.

The military resent the civilian defense officials and seldom miss a chance to "nick" them. Result of this undercover antipathy is a constant state of strained relations which naturally hampers results.

Illustrative of the army-navy attitude was the coup of navy brasshats in sneaking an amendment into the priorities bill while it was in the house of representatives, making them, in effect, masters of the OPM. It required direct administration intervention to kill this scheme in the senate.

A later case is the issue of sub-contracting, one of the most serious problems facing defense chiefs.

There are thousands of plants all over the country able and eager to make parts for defense orders. An effective system of sub-contracting utilizing these unused production facilities would tremendously increase both the speed and volume of armament output. But many primary contractors balk at sub-contracting, and the brass-hats side with them.

Finally forcing a showdown, OPM Associate Director Sidney Hillman demanded an OPM ruling that all big Army contracts contain mandatory sub-contracting clauses.

Procurement Reform.

OPM chiefs agreed to this and named a subcommittee, consisting of Hillman, Knudsen, Production Director Biggers, Priorities Director Stettinius, and Purchasing Chief Nelson. They are working out a concrete plan on the proportion of sub-contracting to be required, but while they are doing this, Army procurement chiefs are secretly doing everything they can to scuttle the program.

Likewise they are busy sniping at a bill to concentrate all defense procurement in a single independent agency, instead of scattering it among a score of bureaus. This reform long has been urged by business experts to eliminate overlapping, red-tape, duplication and other bureaucratic evils.

Of course, such an agency would mean the elimination of numerous brasshats and their multitudinous staffs, and as in all entrenched bureaucracies, self-preservation comes first.

Note—OPM insiders place much of the blame for the delay in placing urgent defense orders on Army procurement chiefs, whom they charge with not being big enough to handle the tremendous jobs thrust on them.

Spontaneous Aid.

If Mayor LaGuardia runs short of ideas on how to keep the Office of Civilian Defense going at top speed, he can get some pointers from his chief in the White House.

Keenly interested in enabling every man, woman and child to "play a part," no matter how small, in the defense program, Roosevelt feels that the big flaw so far has been that the average person has not been made to "feel" that he can contribute something.

Discussing this with Defense advisers the other day, the President remarked that one of the best ways to stimulate civilian participation in preparedness was the organization of movements such as "Bundles for Britain."

"Bundles for Britain was an excellent idea," he said, "because it made people realize that in helping the British they were also making a contribution to our own defense. But it is only a start. Other movements of a similar nature should be encouraged. Why not Binoculars for Britain, also?"

To illustrate his point, the President related how in the World war, when he was Assistant Secretary of Navy, it was announced that the Navy needed more binoculars than American factories were producing. In a few weeks thousands of binoculars poured in from patriotic donors all over the country.

"Some weren't suitable to our needs, but a great many were," said the President. "However, it wasn't the material value of the gifts that counted so much as the spirit behind them. That's what impressed me more than anything—the spontaneous desire of civilians everywhere to help when they thought they could be of service."

New "Dolly Gann" War.

It has been a long, long time since Dolly Gann and Alice Roosevelt Longworth staged their great social war over who should come into dinner first. But the seeds planted by that war are sprouting even today.

Latest to raise the precedence issue was Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, wife of the Political Adviser of the State Department. She was attending a dinner given by the former French military attache, Colonel Emmanuel Lombard, and his attractive wife, who had seated Mrs. Hornbeck at the left of the host. At the host's right and in the No. 1 place of honor sat Mrs. Wallace Murray, whose husband is Chief of the State Department's Near Eastern Division.

To the average citizen of Kalamazoo or Kankakee there is no great difference between the official ranks of the State Department's Adviser on Political Relations and its Chief of the Division of Near Eastern Affairs. Geographically, of course, there is a big difference. Dr. Hornbeck is a specialist on China and the Far East, while Wallace Murray is a specialist on Turkey, Egypt and the Near East.

A lot of people don't bother about these technicalities, but to the practised social eye, Dr. Hornbeck, as Political Adviser, ranks ahead of Mr. Murray as Division Chief.

Mrs. Hornbeck is one of those with a practised social eye. And no sooner did she see that she was on the left of her host, with Mrs. Murray on his right, than she said in a voice which the whole table could hear: "Everyone makes mistakes, my dear, even as thee and me."

"What was that?" asked Madame Lombard, worried by Mrs. Hornbeck's indignant eye, but not comprehending the "terrible faux pas."

"I said, everyone makes mistakes, my dear, even as thee and me. I just wanted to call your attention, Helen, to the fact that I outrank Mrs. Murray on every occasion."

Dinner guests gasped, then hastily covered the confusion. Shortly after coffee was served, Mrs. Hornbeck departed.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Answering the mail orders:

Mrs. C. L., Waterbury, N. J.—The first American ace was Raoul Lufbery, who, according to early World war recorders, "destroyed more than 40 German airplanes, but only got credit for 17 official victories, because most of his combats were so far in enemy territory that French army observers could not officially record them." Lufbery was a graduate of the Lafayette Escadrille and one of the first members of the First pursuit squadron, A.E.F. He was shot down in aerial combat in May, 1918.

T. K., Pekin, Ill.—The reason you haven't heard more about the airmail pickup system which I wrote about several months ago is that the government is not licensing any more of these companies feeding airmail to the grass-roots until the airmail rate case of the pioneer company, All-American Aviation, Inc., is decided by the Civil Aeronautics board. The hearings still are going on. All-American is now servicing about 108 small communities in six states with non-stop airmail service. But nine other companies, servicing 1,300 communities in 29 states over a flying area of 22,000 miles have license applications pending. The All-American hearings should be concluded shortly and if the CAB should rule that licenses should be granted to all or most of these firms, there will be a rapid expansion of airmail service.

Mrs. N. D. L., Iowa City, Iowa—There are 30,051 Civilian Conservation corps boys studying in defense classes now. Classes include auto mechanics, wood working, metal working, electricity, radio, aviation mechanics, welding, cooking and baking. If your son is particularly interested in any of these subjects, it would be well to make that clear to CCC officials so he may be sent to a camp where that particular trade is being taught.

M. R. T., Beaumont, Tex.—There are 362 colleges and universities (or about one in three in the entire program) that now give credits for courses taken under the civilian pilots training program. CPT officials say they expect the number will be increased next fall, as the program just got into full swing this year. Letters to the colleges or universities you would like to attend should bring information as to whether credits on a degree for CPT courses are allowed there and to what extent.

Miss E. W., Lansing, Mich.—The bureau of labor statistics says living costs are just 2.6 per cent higher now than in the month before the present war started, August, 1939. During the World war the c. of l. went about 50 per cent higher than today. At present living costs generally are a little below the five-year 1935-39 level. Some observers here believe that they will go to that level but not much above it without drawing fire from Leon Henderson's office of price administration and civilian supply.

A Farmer's Diary

The Common Crab

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

ALONG the edge of our calamus swamp and inland many feet, where the water table is high, are numerous holes. The smaller ones are less than the size of a man's thumb, the larger openings measure an inch across. Sometimes they enter the bank perpendicularly; often they slant at different angles. Always, it seems, the earth is not deposited around the aperture, but at one side. In lower ground, the dirt removed mixes with water and forms a sticky mass which dries in the sun as hard as Egyptian bricks. On higher ground, the excavated dirt is light and aerated.

To find the maker of these holes, I have taken a shovel and spaded up the soil. But he was elusive and retreated into the water that seemed to underlie the softened grainy subsoil.

But only two weeks ago, walking south toward Honey Creek, I suddenly came upon the creature I had hunted long—and saw him scurry into his hole. It was the common crab—we used to call them "crawdads"—that had fled from the stream and taken up his hermitage beneath the sod.

The riddle became clearer. How many times, as a boy, have I seen a crab zip beneath a stone near the bank and when I turned it over he was gone! The wary creature had a dugout through the bank that penetrated, perhaps, far into the nearest field.

One moonlit night last week I stood on the moist ground beside the pond and heard peculiar rustlings through the dewy grass of the lawn. I thought it must be newly developed frogs, until I grabbed one that rushed by my toe and to my surprise found I held a wriggling crab. They are natural scavengers, who eat worms or insects alive or dead, or feast upon microscopic animals of the soil. Tender plants, too, serve as a source of food.

In the south, I learn, they root out young cotton from the fields and all along the levees—built to keep the rivers from overflowing when spring rains come—they burrow through by the millions and make openings far out upon the level land. When the rivers rise, this fifth column has worked so that water comes spouting out, like little springs and all the Dutch boys in the world would not have thumbs enough to stop the flow.

Their enemies are the skunk, opossum, the king bird, the king fisher—and man. The white meat of the crab's tail makes excellent bait for fishing.

William Cooper Howells, father of William Dean Howells, the novelist and writer, was a migratory, anti-slavery journalist in Ohio, and had little to share with his cherished second son but a scant dole of bread, high principle, a buoyant humor, and a liking and capacity for letters.

The father was of Welsh extraction, whose flannel-making ancestors followed their products to America. They wandered and ventured for two generations until the novelist's father finally settled in Ohio.

Howells edited or published papers at Hamilton, Dayton, Xenia, and Martins Ferry, where, in 1837, the author was born.

Love—By Trial and Error

By Kathrn Bemis (Copyright, 1941)

CHAPTER XVIII.

She sat there staring into space so long that dawn came and she could hear the rumble of the early traffic. The milkman came through the hall, rattling the morning milk bottles. She shook herself upright.

Automatically, she opened her door and took in her pint of milk.

She dragged herself out to the kitchenette and absent-mindedly put the bottle on top of the electric refrigerator instead within it.

She finally managed to take off her clothes, let down her bed and crawl into it.

She tried to close nervous eyes, but they felt like big hard marbles, too big for their lids.

She lay awake until sunshine streamed steadily through the cotton window curtains, her brain visualizing the quick flame in Bill Anderson's hazel eyes when he told her last night that he loved her. She saw the barren years stretching ahead without that love and felt as if she could not go on living.

Love was the biggest thing in the world, and not worldly success, as Bill apparently thought. What sort of husband would he make Rosalind unless he could love her?

She attempted again to put all this from her mind, but her thoughts went on madly racing and she could not control them. She and Bill—lost to each other forever! Bill plainly showing last night how terribly upset he was over her engagement to Rex—yet expecting her to accept without protest his engagement to another woman.

Oh, she was thankful that Rex was taking her far away so soon after the wedding ceremony! She'd be in Hollywood—so far from Bill Anderson, she'd never have to hear or think of him again. Or—if she did think of him, no one would ever know and, perhaps in time, this horrid torture called love would fade entirely away. Time, it was said, cured nearly everything.

FINALLY, from sheer exhaustion, Raye slept and dreamed of Bill and Rex. She saw them fighting a desperate duel—Bill, the redcoated officer, Rex, the distinguished-looking ambassador of last night's costume ball. Rex raised his sword and was lunging toward Bill's heart when she awoke screaming.

She sat up in bed and rubbed her eyes open with clenched fists. She felt unbearably restless, even more so than last night.

Resolutely, she went into the bathroom, drew a tub of hot water and into it generously sprinkled fragrant bath salts she had brought from Paris in her better days.

She sat a long time in the soothing bath and a new courage began flowing through her whole body. Rex had insisted that hereafter she would not be needed in his office, so now she had all the time in the world to waste. She had nearly finished the business college course and, anyway, she would probably never need to use it. She was going to be the wife of a famous Hollywood scenario writer.

She tried to cuddle this thought pleasantly in her mind. She would live a highly exciting life in the picture colony, call the biggest stars by their given names. Rex knew them all intimately and naturally the majority of his friends were actors, writers, composers, agents and directors, all famous in their respective lines.

Yes, it was going to be a glittering life to lead. Perhaps even more so than the social whirl she had moved in up to a short while ago. Now of course many of her old friends were treating her a trifle indifferently. Perhaps because she couldn't return their lavish entertainment. Perhaps they forgot what lavish entertainment she had provided for them in the past. Not that she minded, she hastily tried to assure herself. They hadn't been real friends, that's all. Perhaps you didn't have friends in quantity unless you could give as well as take. Perhaps you were voted more or less of a dud unless you could keep up your end.

But the hurt of this—and sometimes it had hurt—would soon be over with. She was going to marry Rex and be in such a gay whirl out on the coast that all her old friends would be green with envy.

Somehow, though, even this was little satisfaction to her now.

She decided to go shopping for a few inexpensive necessities she would need for Monday's journey. And that ceremony took—perhaps ten minutes—perhaps less. She shivered. Then she told herself that she was acting perfectly silly. She had made up her mind, hadn't she?

She was dressed at last in her plain black suit and hat, a white lawn blouse crisply dainty under her coat.

She grabbed up her black handbag and opened the door. She started violently.

"Oh!" she exclaimed. "How you frightened me!"

The uniformed messenger boy grinned and held out a telegram. "Sorry, ma'am," he said. "Please sign here."

She signed his book on the line he indicated, a forbidding of evil clutching her.

She closed the door and turned the yellow envelope over and over in her hand, dreading to open it.

When she did, she decided her hunch had been correct. Aunt Susan was not only arriving in town—she was coming, she wired, to live with her niece!

What a complication! Raye wondered what to do. Aunt Susan, who had deserted her and then was unable to support herself, had at this inopportune time decided to take potluck with the only person in the world who would never turn her away. One couldn't leave one's own aunt in the lurch—neither did one like to saddle a husband with an unappreciative spendthrift like auntie!

Raye nervously tossed the telegram on a table and stood in the middle of the room trying to find some solution to this new problem. But there didn't seem to be any.

Auntie, who had forgotten how to economize—auntie who would require more petting, entertaining and allowance than any other human being on earth that Raye could think of! She would make Rex and his bride perfectly miserable. One couldn't start a successful marriage on so dangerous a basis.

Raye sighed and went over to the telephone. It might take days to settle auntie amicably for all concerned. It might even be better to postpone the wedding.

Raye called Rex's office.

"Rex—I've bad news."

"Darling—what's happened?" His anxiety was loverlike.

Raye told him quickly, "We cant be married Monday. Aunt Susan is arriving on the noon train."

"Is that all? You had me scared," Rex said, in a relieved voice. "We should have at least one relative at our wedding, dear. I can't see why her presence should complicate matters—unless she doesn't approve of me."

"On the contrary, she's rather crazy about you. But she's in a very unsettled state of mind. I'll have to see that she gets a situation. She has to earn a living and . . ."

"Why bother?" Rex's laugh was careless. "She can live with us, can't she? Or we'll fix her up with a little apartment near us."

"I'm—I'm afraid that wouldn't work."

Raye wanted to add, "You don't know auntie," but she refrained.

She knew how decidedly out of place auntie would be in any harmonious household—auntie with her set opinions about everything in general. Hollywood would horify her. Also, her extravagances would know no bounds if she thought a high-salaried man like Rex was standing by to pass out checks. Auntie and her coming here—auntie was impediment enough to make a marriage go on the rocks before it got fairly under way. There must be some other way. There had to be.

"But darling—it's foolish to allow her to interfere with our plans!"

"I'm sorry, Rex—but I don't think so."

"Oh, come now! Theres nothing to it! We'll meet her train, take her to lunch and plan a darn nice future for her—comfortable, you know."

"We-ll—all right," came slowly from Raye, who wondered now if she hadn't been snatching a little too eagerly at a loophole of escape. Of course it was to late now to back out of marrying Rex. She'd have to go through with it.

As if he sensed what was running through her mind, Rex said, "Cheer up, sweetheart. I'm not letting you off at this late hour. Nothing can change our plans for Monday, darling. Or—am I assuming too much?"

"I've—I've promised, Rex," she faltered, her heart heavy. "I always try to—to keep promises.'

And this was Saturday! Only a few hours—from Monday!

"Then I'll see you within an hour? I'd come after you, but I'm up to my eyebrows in work. You'll see a terrific mess down here." His voice had a happy ring that made Raye feel nearly guilty. If she could only love him!

"I'll be there, Rex," she told him quickly and hung up.

She stood tautly, pressing her black-gloved fingers hard against her throbbing temples.

Finally she shook herself into a semblance of courage, tucked her handbag under her arm and went out into the cool, bracing morning air.

She rode a streetcar into the downtown district, unmindful of the admiring glances of nearby passengers, any of whom would have given a great deal to be so young and beautiful.

The car swung quickly past parks strewn with dry leaves and petals, flower beds looking starkly naked, with the exception of canna circles which arrogantly flaunted their crimson heads as if in defiance to on-coming frost.

A slight shiver ran thraugh Raye and she wondered where exactly she would be the middle of next winter. Perhaps it would be pleasant once more to exchange sunshine for sharp wind and snow. She and Aunt Susan had done it in the old care-free days. She had thought it fun then. Now-nothing could ever again warm her heart.

Honeymoon Trip Advised For Newlyweds

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

My morning's mail brings a letter from a mother which is as timely as today's headlines. The letter follows:

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"My reckless romantic daughter is about to become a bride, and she and her infatuated fiance, who is soon to leave for camp, are determined to have a two weeks' honeymoon, although I know that they cannot afford it. It's foolish to marry a draftee at this time anyhow.

They are very young, haven't much money, and their little one-room, kitchenette and bath apartment isn't even furnished yet. My husband and I are unable to give them any assistance. Instead of saving every cent, they want to spend all the precious money they can get hold of to go on a honeymoon away from everybody. They do need the influence of someone like you, Miss Fairfax. Won't you please advise them? My daughter has been assured she may keep her job.

"A MOTHER."

My dear, worrying mother, in this case I must disappoint you. The truth of the matter is, that I'm all for the honeymoon, draftee or not.

Of course we all know thrift is a necessary virtue. Family life goes on the rocks if economy isn't practised. There's no greater mistake than that of spending money one hasn't got. Surely we must all agree about these things.

And yet my belief is that even in the most conscientious and industrious lives, there are times when the eternal duty to save and scrimp has to give way a little. The beginning of married life is one of those times.

If it is ever justifiable to forget one's job and neglect one's housekeeping, to spend just a little more than one can well afford, to be foolish and impetuous and carelessly happy, to be divinely young, it is during those first weeks of married love.

If I were to worry over a young bride, it would be in the case of one who would be willing to march straight from the wedding ceremony into her own neat, new kitchen, and to tackle a shiny saucepan in preparation of the next day's dinner, without a single romantic flutter, without any desire for at least a brief period of uninterrupted solitude with the One Man in the World.

Marriage must begin with a few raptures, at least, and those raptures demand a time and place.

How can a young couple really get acquainted with one another and learn how to live happily and sensibly together, if neighbors, friends or in-laws are free to drop in for visits all day long, maybe stay to dinner and to spend the evening?

Friends and families are welcome later, but not until the newlyweds have had their one important romantic adventure, their honeymoon journey.

As for the expense, even though I have suggested that this love-journey is so important with reference to future happiness that it deserves to be the solitary extravagance of a life-time, the extravagance can be of a very mild sort.

Happiness costs nothing. Love itself costs not a penny. In the present stage of the world's madness, don't you think it's well for young people to snatch at any straws of happiness that may come their way? There never has been anything safe or sane about love since the beginning of time.

In the case of a young draftee and the girl he's about to marry, let's realize that love is the most important thing in the world.

Tomorrow's Problem.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

The mental prediction I had made when Olga first asked to see me alone was being justified, I told myself, and I could see only one interpretation of the menace from which she wished to guard Mary—as yet unnamed. I could put a name to it very readily, and I was sure Nancy Carew had also tagged it. The menace to Mary—and to Noel—was Stephen Redfield.

"Dear Olga," I adjured her earnestly, "don't you know that I could not possibly think you officious? Won't you tell me what is troubling you? Indeed, I am quite sure that I know something of the problem already."

"Yes, you must have seen them when you came in," she said. "I did not see you at first, for I was so absorbed in watching Mary with that—that man."

Fears Wreck of Marriage.

"But I realize now," she went on "that you and Noel must have been standing inside the door way long enough for your keen perceptions to see what is happening."

"Just what do you think is happening?" I asked her, sparring for time.

Her answer brought me bolt upright in my chair, as an electric shock might have done.

"I am afraid Noel and Mary are perilously near the wrecking of their marriage," she said somberly.

"Oh! no, no!" I expostulated, appalled at her grave apprehension. I had foreseen serious trouble as the result of the combination formed by Redfield's attentions to Mary and Noel's jealousy of them, but I had not gone as far in fear as she patently had done.

The next second, however, I brought myself back to calm reasoning, with the reflection that her training had not equipped her to deal with the temperamental vagaries of theatrical people, who are so accustomed to simulating emotions that some of them have trouble recognizing a real one.

"I do trust you are over-rating the danger," I told her.

She leaned toward me, while her eyes met mine steadily.

"That is what I have been hoping," she said. "That is why I have wanted so much to see you, for you know Mary better than anyone else does; far better, I am afraid, than does her young husband."

Under my breath, I said "Amen" to her last statement, but aloud I simply uttered a noncommittal "Yes, I have been very close to Mary," and then added the obvious plea.

"Won't you begin at the beginning, and tell me all about it?" I asked.

"That is what I want to do," she said simply. "It isn't a long story, but to me it is a sad, even a tragic one."

Realistic Lovemaking.

"Every since the play opened," she began, "this man Stephen Redfield has been pursuing Mary. I can think of no other word for his attentions. His lovemaking on the stage is so realistic that comment is being aroused."

I nodded comprehendingly. I had seen one of those Quilpish printed comments, but, knowing the commentator, who never needs facts to point his tips, I had thought nothing of it.

"If Mr. Redfield would confine himself and his actions to the stage," she went on, "no one — save, perhaps, Noel — could possibly object."

She punctuated her dictum with an involuntary little sigh of frustration.

"But poor Noel, alas! is not approaching the problem with either calmness or reason."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

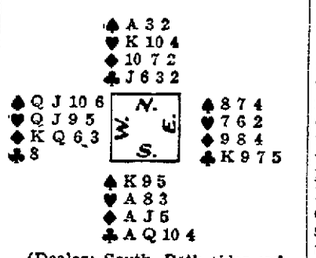
by

Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

SOLID SEQUENCES BEST

When you lead the top of a three-card solid honor sequence, you know you are not building up some honor for the declarer. If you have a two-card touching honor top to your combination, and below it a card just once removed from touching, such as a K-G-10 or a Q-J-9, you generally lose a trick by the lead if the missing honor is at your left. When you lead from a K-Q or Q-J top without either a toucher or next-to-toucher just below it, you usually forfeit a trick unless you find your partner with either the J or 10 respectively.



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT

Here West had the problem of leading from all three of the different kinds of honor combinations described. It is clear that if he leads a spade he does not build up a trick for the declarer, but only for himself. With a heart lead, he will definitely give up a trick. If he leads a small one, the declarer's third trick in the suit is built at once; if his Q, he builds a winning finessee of the 10 over his J. Note that this would not be so if the 10 were in the South hand, or in East's.

A diamond lead also will build a trick for the declarer, enabling him to get two tricks in the suit, the first and third.

Actually West led the spade Q to the A. The declarer finessed clubs, took in the Q and then saw he could get only three tricks there, plus two in spades, two in hearts and one in diamonds, not enough. But a lead-throwing play would do it. So he cashed the spade K and put West in with the 9 to take two spade tricks. But then West had to lead from one of his red suits. Whether an honor or a small card, he would build the game trick for South. Hoping his partner had the diamond J, he led the 3, and South ran his sure tricks then to complete the contract.

Train Child In Etiquette When Toddler

By GARRY C. MYERS, M.D.

No thoughtful parent will neglect the teaching of good manners to the child, since by means of good manners he may win and keep many friends. Anyway, the basic spirit of good manners is consideration for the rights and feelings of others—unselfishness.

Nevertheless, many parents nag so much at the child over manners that, instead of winning his cooperation they only arouse resistance and antagonism in him, with poor results. It is in relation to table manners that many conscientious parents are least successful. In all too many homes, the family eat to the tune of "Not so big bites! Lips closed! Sit up! Don't tip your chair! Use your napkin!" Sometimes the mother will say nothing else the whole meal through—not a very cheerful dinner atmosphere.

The average mother expects far too much of the young child by way of table manners. She fails to realize that the youngster's lack of muscular control and coordination renders it hard to do well what he is expected to do, such as handling of the knife and fork. Her unreasonable demands not only hamper his cooperation and success but also cause him, sometimes, to dislike certain foods or to dawdle over his whole meal.

Many conscientious mothers would be more reasonable and successful at cultivating good table manners in their children, even in the toddlers, were these mothers not so serious about the problem.

Child's Limitations

Parents should get a knowledge of child development, then they will not ignore the young child's limitations in motor coordination and control. Children must not be judged by grown-up standards.

One celebrated writer says, for example, that "very few parents pay enough attention to little children's table manners"; that "the average child can be taught to eat nicely at the age of two and a half, and beautifully at the age of three."

Perhaps he can but the mother who tries to make a child so young eat beautifully or nicely will almost surely have some eating problems on her hands and both she and the child may become patients of the psychologist or psychiatrist.

The poised mother who doesn't nag at her child about table manners but only occasionally suggests how he can "do it better and be big," exercising good manners herself, is likely to have a child who will gradually acquire good manners.

There are a number of good books on manners for parents and their children to read. A list of such may be had by writing me in care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. After a child has been punished for some misdemeanor is it wise to bring up the matter later?

A. No; after the punishment has ended close the matter forever.

Q. Can a child read too much?

A. No.; unless his reading interferes with ample time for outdoor fun with other children, and sharing in the home responsibilities ,and provided he reads well selected and balanced material and his eyes are not overtaxed.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, May 27.

THERE are auguries of an active and intriguing day, in which there should develop security and solidity to the fortunes and objectives, judging by lunar and mutual aspects. This should be demonstrated or involve public, community or group interests, with emphasis placed on social affairs as well as domestic and sentimental relations. There may be unforeseen changes sustained by sound reasons and logic, but nevertheless there are omens of duplicity, fraud and undercover attempts to ensnare or betray.

Those whose birthday it is may look for an active year in which things move into solid and substantial grooves, with security for the future, probably of a public nature or involving group solidarity. Revamping of plans or other change may be required but in all be alert to fraud, schemes and hidden enmity or attempts to undermine, by intrigue and subtlety. A happy year of a social, domestic, cultural or romantic association is shown.

A child born on this day should be studious, persistent, dependable, with creative ability in art, science, religion, and keen interest in public welfare. It may be easily imposed upon and deceived, because of jealousy or secret enmity.

MONTANA PUTS STATEWIDE LID ON ALL GAMING

Action Follows the Defeat of Repeal Measures In Legislature.

BUTTE, Mont.—(U.P.)—This mining camp town was almost pure today, but not because it wanted to be.

The saloons still were open, but the city's famous gambling joints—the most elaborate and well-patronized in the west—except those in Reno—were deserted and dreary.

Gone was the chant of the dice-table dealers, the sing-song of the lottery board men, the soft shuffle of cards at the "twenty-one" and poker tables, and the click and whir of the roulette wheels.

The two largest gambling places in town were closed except for their bars and lunch counters. The gaudy houses in Meaderville, Butte's "play" suburb, were doing business only at their bars and dining rooms.

Except at private clubs, there wasn't a slot machine in town, and the only punchboards in evidence were "trade stimulators"—not the cash-prize boards which crowded almost every counter in town before the shutdown.

The shutdown was the result of a letter to all of Montana's 56 county attorneys from Atty. Gen. John W. Bonner. He pointed out that the legislature had refused to legalize and license gambling, and that the old anti-gambling statutes still were on the books.

The result of the letter was an immediate shutdown, except by a few rugged individualists who decided to keep their slot machines going. Raids in Missoula, Bozeman, Shelby, Virginia City, Havre and here—in which machines were seized and destroyed—convinced them that the shutdown was the real thing. Ten slot machines seized by police here, and destroyed under orders of District Judge J. J. Lynch, netted the county $106 in coins. The money was credited to the county poor fund.

The recent session of the Montana legislature devoted hours of debate to a series of bills to legalize and license gambling, and to permit the state, counties and cities to tax the enterprises. But on their final votes, the legislators killed all of the measures, including one for a constitutional amendment to permit Montana to operate a state lottery. Bonner's letter followed the final vote.

The situation here was only a counterpart of that in the state's other large towns. Reports to Bonner from Great Falls, Billings, Missoula, Bozeman and Helena all indicated there was no open gambling.

THEATERS

Human Elements.

Frank Capra's fine understanding of the human element that made "You Can't Take It With You" and "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," such universal favorites manifests itself again in "Meet John Doe," the story of an average man, now showing at the Ohio. Following the Capra tradition every character is life-like from John Doe, down on his luck but ambitious to get ahead, to the most minor character. Gary Cooper turns in another big performance in the title role and is supported by Barbara Stanwyck as a newspaper columnist, Edward Arnold, Spring Byington and James Gleason.

Store Fireworks.

When the millionaire-manager of a huge department store posing as a clerk is mistaken for a penniless old man by an up and coming salesman, fireworks are bound to happen and they do in "The Devil and Miss Jones," playing at the Madison. Charles Coburn is the department store owner trying to ferret out union activities while Jean Arthur plays the clerk. Robert Cummings as her sweetheart, Spring Byington and William Demarest are in the cast: "The Cowboy and the Blonde," with Mary Beth Hughes and George Montgomery is the second film.

Spectacular Blaze.

One of the greatest fires ever staged for a movie blazes in "Western Union," current attraction at the Ritz. Filmed in technicolor the production depicts the engineering achievement of a telegraph builder in the frontier west and sets forth all the roaring action of the locale that Zane Grey wrote about so well in his novel by the same name. Dean Jagger plays Edward Creighton, the man through whom coast to coast communication became a realty. Virginia Gilmore, Randolph Scott and Robert Young are in the cast. Jane Withers in 'Golden Hoofs" is the second picture.

Mystery Comedy.

"Who Killed Aunt Maggie?" mystery-comedy showing at the Park, teams Wendy Barrie with John Hubbard in the story of two young moderns who laugh at murder until they find the girl in the case is a suspect, Elizabeth Patterson, Joyce Compton and Mona Barrie are in the cast. The son and grandson of the famous Alsatian shepherd dog "Strongheart" appear in "Sign of the Wolf," the second picture dealing with a renegade wolf dog who is trained to steal valuable furs in the Canadian wilds. Michael Whalen and Grace Bradley head the cast.

Cabbage Found To Keep Away Tooth Trouble

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—The cabbage head, long a subject of ridicule in literature and song, now may be held high. It has been crowned with laurels in the medical world.

Three Ohio State university scientists, R. C. Burrell, H. D. Brown and Virginia R. Ebright, reported in the magazine Food Research that fresh cabbage ranks high in the list of fruits and vegetables containing vitamin C, which helps prevent tooth decay, bone softening and muscle weakening.

The Journal of the American Medical Association, commenting on the findings of the Ohio chemists, said, "The vitamin C requirements of the adult may be supplied by a small portion of coleslaw." Hot cabbage, however, is not as rich because the cabbage loses its vitamin through cooking.

For those that don't like cabbage despite its vitamin value, it is reported by scientists of the University of North Carolina and Meredith college, Raleigh, N. C., that strawberries, too, are rich in vitamin C. Thirty or forty berries will provide the daily requirement for an adult.

TRAINS FORCE

COLUMBUS, O.—(U.P.)—The city of Columbus is instituting a 14-week training course for 300 volunteer firemen who would be called to duty in extreme emergencies.

Fire Chief Edward P. Welch will select the fire fighting volunteers from the American Legion organizations in the city. They will serve without pay and relieve the city of responsibility in event of injury.

WAR CHANGES CHOIR

MELBOURNE, Australia—(U.P.)—The famous Mozart Viennese boys choir, which was touring Australia when the war broke out, has been absorbed into the choir of St. Patrick's cathedral here. Its director, Dr. George Gruber, has been appointed musical director of the cathedral.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself.

I'LL BET Lana Turner is fed up with all those "sweater" gags, but I'll bet the boys aren't. . . . Poor Lana, she's tried so hard to have a real New York vacation and see the town, but she's never succeeded.

Dorothy Kilgallen

The first time she came was on her honeymoon with Artie Shaw, and she never got her nose inside the silken joints because Artie didn't like them; he took her to see life in Lindy's and little places downtown on Essex street.

The second time she came, she arrived at the Sherry-Netherland, signed her name on the register, and was handed a telegram—a telegram from Louis B. Mayer telling her to return to Hollywood in two days to start a new picture.

This last time, she thought she was going to make the grade. She did see a few shows and a couple of night clubs—then she got a telephone call from Tony Martin saying: "Your mother is pretty sick; you'd better come back."

So she flew home.

I don't like fish as household pets. In fact, I don't like fish. They're too slimy. I like furry things, like kittens with pretty smiles. . . . Second only to the measles is the gin rummy epidemic. All over town people are playing it; while they eat, while they drink, while they gab, while they woo.

Moss Hart and Irving Berlin had a lengthy session at the Cub Room the other evening, and when they had finished and were going past my table, Moss said, "That's the most irritating game, isn't it?" "Certainly is," I replied. Then I played for two more hours.

Funniest picture I've seen in ages is "Love Crazy," the William Powell-Myrna Loy opus.

Nothing looks more forlorn than the Palace stage door, symbol of a dead era. . . . For an exciting place, give me a steel factory. But only give it to me for about five minutes.

Wonderful place for autograph seekers is one I'll bet you've never heard of—the Bryant Hotel bar. It's right next to CBS Playhouse No. 3 and it's always crowded with people like Fred Allen.

Now I've seen everything. Lucille Johnson, the night club entertainer, really bakes her own bread! . . . First editions don't impress me much, or first edition collectors. A good book is a good book, first edition or eleventh edition, and owning a first edition of a dull book wouldn't make me read it.

Best band I've heard in a long time is Claude Thornhill's. His arangements are really almost Too Good for the Average Man.

Rooms with wallpaper always seem cheerier than rooms with paint.

I think Joan Crawford is one of Hollywood's most underrated actresses. Because she's been tossed by her studio into one sex opera after another; because she's been saddled with plots designed for the glamor-loving masses instead of the critics, very few authorities on the subject noticed that she can act as well as wear Adrian's clothes better than anyone else.

But give her a part—give her something like "Susan and God" or "A Woman's Face"—and what does she do? She turns in a fine performance. Boys, polish up the Oscars.

Whenever I see Frank Case poking his head into one of the Algonquin's public rooms, I wonder if he is doing what could be described as "Casing the joint?"

I like very thin men better than very fat men. . . . Walter Pigeon waiting around town is an attractive sight to see. . . . I see the debbies have taken to wearing those red suspenders Sherman Billingsley is passing out to favored lads. Nothing's sacred.

I've never yet felt the yen to build a house in the country. I like looking up and seeing skyscrapers stabbing the sky. When I start knowing the difference between a maple tree and an oak, I'll know I'm getting old.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—"One Night In Lisbon." Screenplay by Virginia Van Upp from play by John Van Druten. Directed by Edward H. Griffith. Principals: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Patricia Morison, Billie Burke, John Loder, Dame May Whitty, Edmund Gwenn, Reginald Denny, Billy Gilbert.

The current war isn't very funny; this picture, with the current war as a background, is exceedingly so.

The setting is London today, London under the Nazi bombs. Boy meets girl in a bomb shelter during a raid; another raid breaks up a cafe party at which boy is trying to win girl away from her stolid British escort; when the scene shifts to London, boy and girl are surrounded by Nazi intrigue. And yet, the result is comedy, light and effervescent, often risque, seldom strained.

MacMurray plays a brash, forthputting Texan flying bombers to Britain; Miss Carroll (and never was a more luscious blond) is the staid British girl who's afraid of being "upset" by contact with life as he typifies it; Loder is the slightly stuffy, fine Britisher ('s t o u t-fella-chin-up-sun-never-sets" is the hero's tag for him) who plays watchdog over the girl.

There's some resemblance, not too much, to the play, "There's Always Juliet" from which the film is taken. The modern touches, bringing in the war and Lisbon (instead of Paris), accent comedy and shun war horror. Even the Nazi agents, operating in Lisbon convey no menace in the usual style. Edmund Gwenn, as the British minister for whom the heroine is chauffeur, typifies in quiet humor the British attitude toward the war, making the slight propaganda motif most acceptable, and demonstrating that Hollywood has become more clever in this respect lately.

"A f f e c t i o n a t e l y Yours." Screenplay by Edward Kaufman from story by Fanya Foss and Aleen Leslie. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. Principals: Merle Oberon, Dennis Morgan, R i t a Hayworth, Ralph B e l l a m y, George Tobias, James Gleason, Hattie McDaniel, Jerome Cowan, Butterfly McQueen.

* * *

Morgan plays a freely romantic foreign correspondent who gets hot and bothered when he hears his wife (Oberon) has divorced him. He ducks his latest girl friend (Hayworth) and flies back to New York to stop his ex-s marriage to that bewildered bumpkin Ralph Bellamy has been playing in so many pictures since "The Awful Truth."

Chatter Corner

(Just fottings about people you know, as they're seen here and there about town.)

Motorcycle Patrolman C. W. Kyler counting his s p e e d i n g "scalps" from week-end motorists. . . . Martha McFarland, clerk in the health department, getting change at the waterworks office. . . . Capt. J. J. Miller cheering up a downcast truck-driver arrested for speeding.

COURT ACTS ON 'SHOWDOWN' ON DISPUTED BONDS

Judge's Order Results In Answer Claiming Plymouth Issue Was Illegal.

An alternative writ had been issued today by Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston in the Plymouth school bonds case, requiring the president and clerk of the board of education to execute and deliver $47,500 in building bonds or show cause by June 2 why they have failed to sign them.

Roy Johnson, president of the board, and Joseph Hodges, clerk, immediately filed an answer, contending that the election at which the bonds were approved was illegal because of errors on the ballots and asking the court to declare the bond issue void.

Johnson and Hodges, who refused to sign the bonds for a new elementary school, were named in a mandamus suit last week by Prosecutor Harold Lutz who sought to force the school officials to legalize the bonds by signing them and turning them over to the purchaser.

Admitting that there were two minor errors on the ballots used in the bond election March 25, the prosecutor said the errors were not serious enough to warrant voiding the bond issue and calling a new election.

Lutz said a mis-placed dollar sign on the ballots reduced the estimated cost of the bonds to one-tenth of the actual cost, while the type used in describing the purpose of the bonds was smaller than that specified by law.

The Plymouth school board approved the bond election last Jan. 16 and the election was held March 25. The bond issue was approved by a vote of 510 to 86. The bonds were sold about three weeks ago to the Farmers Savings and Trust company, Mansfield.

Funds from the bond sale will finance the construction of an elementary building and high school shop addition costing $77,500. The federal government has agreed to furnish labor under a National Youth administration project to reduce the actual cash outlay on the project to $47,500, amount of the bond issue.

FINAL ASSEMBLY GAVEL TO BANG

House, Senate Leaders to Sign Bills Tomorrow, Adjourn 94th Session.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS—Only a handful of legislators will be on hand in the state capitol tomorrow when house and senate write "finis" to their 1941 session.

Presiding officers of both houses are slated to call members to order in the afternoon—probably about 2 p. m.

About 80 bills passed prior to the recess early this month will be signed by Lieut.-Gov. Paul M. Herbert (R.) of Columbus and House Speaker William McCulloch (R.) of Miami.

This process of enrolling over, the ninety-fourth general assembly will adjourn sine die and only a special call of the governor can bring them back.

One of the bills to be enrolled is the $352,000,000 appropriation measure to operate the state government in the next biennium.

There is much discussion of a special session later this year and possibly next year, but it is of the type that generally follows adjournment and no one can gauge its accuracy.

SIX CHILDREN GET WILD RIDE ON RUNAWAY ELEPHANT AT ZOO

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND — Six children breathlessly told playmates today of a wild ride on the back of a runaway elephant while their parents gratefully described the bravery of a 35-year-old keeper who saved the six from serious injury or possible death.

The youngsters were riding in a basket-like howdah atop the Cleveland zoo's four-ton elephant, Osa, when the animal suddenly bolted for her quarters.

Storming past a fleeing crowd of several thousand persons, the elephant raced through open doors into the building. There was not enough clearance for the passenger basket and it was ripped from her back, plunging the children toward the ground.

Keeper Joe Chery, running behind the jittery animal, saw the basket hurtling down and braced himself to take its full weight. His "catch" broke the force of the fall and allowed the children to escape with bruises and lacerations.

Capt. Curley Wilson, zoo superintendent, said the usually docile elephant, a gift from Frank Buck, quieted down after reaching her quarters and would not be punished.

C. G. Hillier, scoutmaster of Troop 8, and donor of the Hillier trophy for Boy Scout Troop Advancement, wondered today if the shield which bears the names of the trophy winning troops in the Johnny Appleseed area for the past 11 years has sufficient space for the name of this year's winner to be announced at the Camp-O-Rall in the Shelby next month. He finally decided that the trophy, which has seen some heavy usage, could stand another prize winner. "It's a funny thing," he said, "the more banged up the shield gets through the years, the more Scouts seem to prize it."

A Weller township man, seeking a copy of his birth certificate to qualify for a defense job, learned in probate court this morning that he was officially born a girl. The birth record showed the correct date of the man's birth and the names of his parents, but it gave him a girl's name and listed him as a female. Court attaches, unable to explain the mix-up, said they would set the record straight if the applicant returned with his parents to testify the baby born on the day of the man's birth was a boy and not a girl.

PLANS INQUIRY INTO REPORTS OF 'CLASHES'

Group Hears of Controversies Between OPM Officials and New Dealers.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — The senate defense committee plans a cautious investigation into reports of controversies existing within the far-flung national defense organization, it was announced today.

"There are some differences of opinion within the Office of Production Management, but whether they are the result of constructive or destructive efforts I do not know," said Sen. Truman (D., Mo.) chairman of the committee. "We will go into the matter."

The committee, Truman emphasized, is anxious to avoid publicity which might hamper the defense program, but will seek to ferret out weaknesses in the vast machine which may be remedied.

"There has been a natural tendency in the OPM to go in for the big fellow in defense contracts and the little fellows have been passed by," Truman said.

Conceding that army officers and civilians called in to run the huge defense machine can make honest mistakes as to needs, Truman said he couldn't understand the failure to properly estimate aluminum needs.

"I can't understand the differences between 50,000,000 pounds they thought they needed and 120,000,000 pounds which they find they should have," he said.

William S. Knudsen, OPM chieftain, has repeatedly declared that he is not satisfied with conditions—but based this statement on the ground that he seeks 100 per cent performance and that this usually doesn't come from work of humans.

Reports have circulated in Washington that differences exist between big business men, many serving for $1 a year, and New Dealers in the defense organization.

These reports have been challenged by administration leaders who claim that Knudsen, Sidney Hillman, OPM associate director, Leon Henderson, price control head and others have worked closely together in spite of their differences on many special and economic problems.

Production admittedly has fallen recently, but this has been blamed upon the coal and other strikes.

Terms Cleveland WPA Probe 'Lies, Key-Hole Gossip'

CLEVELAND —(U.P.)— In the wake of an Ohio senate investigation into alleged inequalities and waste on Cleveland WPA projects, WPA District Manager Frank T. Miskell charged today that the probe was built on a "half-truths, downright lies and key-hole gossip."

Miskell said there had been on the Cleveland projects a proportionate decline in administrative staffs with the reduction in the work program.

Denying that there had been favoritism or nepotism in WPA, he added that Senator James Metzenbaum, (D., Cuyahoga) instigator of the investigation, had conducted it in an "outrageous, insulting and indecent manner."

He claimed the senator "apparently wanted to have a field day at our expense."

MONTANA PUTS STATEWIDE LID ON ALL GAMING

Action Follows the Defeat of Repeal Measures In Legislature.

BUTTE, Mont.—(U.P.)—This mining camp town was almost pure today, but not because it wanted to be.

The saloons still were open, but the city's famous gambling joints—the most elaborate and well-patronized in the west—except those in Reno—were deserted and dreary.

Gone was the chant of the dice-table dealers, the sing-song of the lottery board men, the soft shuffle of cards at the "twenty-one" and poker tables, and the click and whir of the roulette wheels.

The two largest gambling places in town were closed except for their bars and lunch counters. The gaudy houses in Meaderville, Butte's 'play" suburb, were doing business only at their bars and dining rooms.

Except at private clubs, there wasn't a slot machine in town, and the only punchboards in evidence were "trade stimulators"—not the cash-prize boards which crowded almost every counter in town before the shutdown.

The shutdown was the result of a letter to all of Montana's 56 county attorneys from Atty. Gen. John W. Bonner. He pointed out that the legislature had refused to legalize and license gambling, and that the old anti-gambling statutes still were on the books.

The result of the letter was an immediate shutdown, except by a few rugged individualists who decided to keep their slot machines going. Raids in Missoula, Bozeman, Shelby, Virginia City, Havre and here—in which machines were seized and destroyed—convinced them that the shutdown was the real thing. Ten slot machines seized by police here, and destroyed under orders of District Judge J. J. Lynch, netted the county $106 in coins. The money was credited to the county poor fund.

The recent session of the Montana legislature devoted hours of debate to a series of bills to legalize and license gambling, and to permit the state, counties and cities to tax the enterprises. But on their final votes, the legislators killed all of the measures, including one for a constitutional amendment to permit Montana to operate a state lottery. Bonner's letter followed the final vote.

The situation here was only a counterpart of that in the state's other large towns. Reports to Bonner from Great Falls, Billings, Missoula, Bozeman and Helena all indicated there was no open gambling.

THEATERS

Human Elements.

Frank Capra's fine understanding of the human element that made "You Can't Take It With You" and "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," such universal favorites manifests itself again in "Meet John Doe," the story of an average man, now showing at the Ohio Following the Capra tradition every character is life-like from John Doe, down on his luck but ambitious to get ahead, to the most minor character Gary Cooper turns in another big performance in the title role and is supported by Barbara Stanwyck as a newspaper columnist, Edward Arnold, Spring Byington and James Gleason.

Store Fireworks.

When the millionaire-manager of a huge department store posing as a clerk is mistaken for a penniless old man by an up and coming salesman, fireworks are bound to happen and they do in "The Devil and Miss Jones," playing at the Madison. Charles Coburn is the department store owner trying to ferret out union activities while Jean Arthur plays the clerk. Robert Cummings as her sweetheart, Spring Byington and William Demarest are in the cast: "The Cowboy and the Blonde," with Mary Beth Hughes and George Montgomery is the second film

Spectacular Blaze.

One of the greatest fires ever staged for a movie blazes in "Western Union" current attraction at the Ritz. Filmed in technicolor the production depicts the engineering achievement of a telegraph builder in the frontier west and sets forth all the roaring action of the locale that Zane Grey wrote about so well in his novel by the same name. Dean Jagger plays Edward Creighton, the man through whom coast to coast communication became a realty. Virginia Gilmore, Randolph Scott and Robert Young are in the cast. Jane Withers in "Golden Hoofs" is the second picture.

Cabbage Found To Keep Away Tooth Trouble

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—The cabbage head, long a subject of ridicule in literature and song, now may be held high. It has been crowned with laurels in the medical world.

Three Ohio State university scientists, R. C. Burrell, H. D. Brown and Virginia R. Ebright, reported in the magazine Food Research that fresh cabbage ranks high in the list of fruits and vegetables containing vitamin C, which helps prevent tooth decay, bone softening and muscle weakening.

The Journal of the American Medical Association, commenting on the findings of the Ohio chemists, said, "The vitamin C requirements of the adult may be supplied by a small portion of coleslaw." Hot cabbage, however, is not as rich because the cabbage loses its vitamin through cooking.

For those that don't like cabbage despite its vitamin value, it is reported by scientists of the University of North Carolina and Meredith college, Raleigh, N. C., that strawberries, too, are rich in vitamin C. Thirty or forty berries will provide the daily requirement for an adult.

Senate to Dig Into U. S. Defense Snarls

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself.

I'LL BET Lana Turner is fed up with all those "sweater" gags, but I'll bet the boys aren't. . . . Poor Lana, she's tried so hard to have a real New York vacation and see the town, but she's never succeeded.

Dorothy Kilgallen

The first time she came was on her honeymoon with Artie Shaw, and she never got her nose inside the silken joints because Artie didn't like them; he took her to see life in Lindy's and little places downtown on Essex street.

The second time she came, she arrived at the Sherry-Netherland, signed her name on the register, and was handed a telegram—a telegram from Louis B. Mayer telling her to return to Hollywood in two days to start a new picture.

This last time, she thought she was going to make the grade. She did see a few shows and a couple of night clubs—then she got a telephone call from Tony Martin saying: "Your mother is pretty sick; you'd better come back."

So she flew home.

I don't like fish as household pets. In fact, I don't like fish. They're too slimy. I like furry things, like kittens with pretty smiles. . . . Second only to the measles is the gin rummy epidemic. All over town people are playing it; while they eat, while they drink, while they gab, while they woo.

Moss Hart and Irving Berlin had a lengthy session at the Cub Room the other evening, and when they had finished and were going past my table, Moss said, "That's the most irritating game, isn't it?" "Certainly is," I replied. Then I played for two more hours.

Funniest picture I've seen in ages is "Love Crazy," the William Powell-Myrna Loy opus.

Nothing looks more forlorn than the Palace stage door, symbol of a dead era. . . . For an exciting place, give me a steel factory. But only give it to me for about five minutes.

Wonderful place for autograph seekers is one I'll bet you've never heard of—the Bryant Hotel bar. It's right next to CBS Playhouse No. 3 and it's always crowded with people like Fred Allen.

* * *

Now I've seen everything. Lucille Johnson, the night club entertainer, really bakes her own bread! . . . First editions don't impress me much, or first edition collectors. A good book is a good book, first edition or eleventh edition, and owning a first edition of a dull book wouldn't make me read it.

Best band I've heard in a long time is Claude Thornhill's. His arangements are really almost Too Good for the Average Man.

Rooms with wallpaper always seem cheerier than rooms with paint.

I think Joan Crawford is one of Hollywood's most underrated actresses. Because she's been tossed by her studio into one sex opera after another; because she's been saddled with plots designed for the glamor-loving masses instead of the critics, very few authorities on the subject noticed that she can act as well as wear Adrian's clothes better than anyone else.

But give her a part—give her something like "Susan and God" or "A Woman's Face"—and what does she do? She turns in a fine performance. Boys, polish up the Oscars.

Whenever I see Frank Case poking his head into one of the Algonquin's public rooms, I wonder if he is doing what could be described as "Casing the joint?"

I like very thin men better than very fat men. . . . Walter Pigeon waiting around town is an attractive sight to see. . . . I see the debbies have taken to wearing those red suspenders Sherman Billingsley is passing out to favored lads. Nothing's sacred.

* * *

I've never yet felt the yen to build a house in the country. I like looking up and seeing skyscrapers stabbing the sky. When I start knowing the difference between a maple tree and an oak, I'll know I'm getting old.

COURT ACTS ON 'SHOWDOWN' ON DISPUTED BONDS

Judge's Order Results In Answer Claiming Plymouth Issue Was Illegal.

An alternative writ had been issued today by Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston in the Plymouth school bonds case, requiring the president and clerk of the board of education to execute and deliver $47,500 in building bonds or show cause by June 2 why they have failed to sign them.

Roy Johnson, president of the board, and Joseph Hodges, clerk, immediately filed an answer, contending that the election at which the bonds were approved was illegal because of errors on the ballots and asking the court to declare the bond issue void.

Johnson and Hodges, who refused to sign the bonds for a new elementary school, were named in a mandamus suit last week by Prosecutor Harold Lutz who sought to force the school officials to legalize the bonds by signing them and turning them over to the purchaser.

Admitting that there were two minor errors on the ballots used in the bond election March 25, the prosecutor said the errors were not serious enough to warrant voiding the bond issue and calling a new election.

Lutz said a mis-placed dollar sign on the ballots reduced the estimated cost of the bonds to one-tenth of the actual cost, while the type used in describing the purpose of the bonds was smaller than that specified by law.

The Plymouth school board approved the bond election last Jan. 16 and the election was held March 25. The bond issue was approved by a vote of 510 to 86. The bonds were sold about three weeks ago to the Farmers Savings and Trust company, Mansfield.

Funds from the bond sale will finance the construction of an elementary building and high school shop addition costing $77,500. The federal government has agreed to furnish labor under a National Youth administration project to reduce the actual cash outlay on the project to $47,500, amount of the bond issue.

Ralph B. Chapman, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., did his good turn today when he discovered the whereabouts of Doyle Painter's clothes. Painter, a Mansfielder now with a unit of the U. S. navy, was stationed in Norwalk, Va., and went to sea leaving his clothes behind. Chapman was asked to recover the clothes which were in the Y. M. C. A. at Norfolk. A letter of inquiry developed the clothes were in a locker there and that the Norfolk Y will soon send them on their way to Mansfield.

C. G. Hillier, scoutmaster of Troop 8, and donor of the Hillier trophy for Boy Scout Troop Advancement, wondered today if the shield which bears the names of the trophy winning troops in the Johnny Appleseed area for the past 11 years has sufficient space for the name of this year's winner to be announced at the Camp-O-Rall in the Shelby next month. He finally decided that the trophy, which has seen some heavy usage, could stand another prize winner. "It's a funny thing," he said, "the more banged up the shield gets through the years, the more Scouts seem to prize it."

A Weller township man, seeking a copy of his birth certificate to qualify for a defense job, learned in probate court this morning that he was officially born a girl. The birth record showed the correct date of the man's birth and the names of his parents, but it gave him a girl's name and listed him as a female. Court attaches, unable to explain the mix-up, said they would set the record straight if the applicant returned with his parents to testify the baby born on the day of the man's birth was a boy and not a girl.

PLANS INQUIRY INTO REPORTS OF 'CLASHES'

Group Hears of Controversies Between OPM Officials and New Dealers.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — The senate defense committee plans a cautious investigation into reports of controversies existing within the far-flung national defense organization, it was announced today.

"There are some differences of opinion within the Office of Production Management, but whether they are the result of constructive or destructive efforts I do not know," said Sen. Truman (D., Mo.) chairman of the committee. "We will go into the matter."

The committee, Truman emphasized, is anxious to avoid publicity which might hamper the defense program, but will seek to ferret out weaknesses in the vast machine which may be remedied.

"There has been a natural tendency in the OPM to go in for the big fellow in defense contracts and the little fellows have been passed by," Truman said.

Conceding that army officers and civilians called in to run the huge defense machine can make honest mistakes as to needs, Truman said he couldn't understand the failure to properly estimate aluminum needs.

"I can't understand the differences between 50,000,000 pounds they thought they needed and 120,000,000 pounds which they find they should have," he said.

William S. Knudsen, OPM chieftain, has repeatedly declared that he is not satisfied with conditions—but based this statement on the ground that he seeks 100 per cent performance and that this usually doesn't come from work of humans.

Reports have circulated in Washington that differences exist between big business men, many serving for $1 a year, and New Dealers in the defense organization.

These reports have been challenged by administration leaders who claim that Knudsen, Sidney Hillman, OPM associate director, Leon Henderson, price control head and others have worked closely together in spite of their differences on many social and economic problems.

Production admittedly has fallen recently, but this has been blamed upon the coal and other strikes.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — "One Night In Lisbon." Screenplay by Virginia Van Upp from play by John Van Druten. Directed by Edward H. Griffith. Principals: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Patricia Morison, Billie Burke, John Loder, Dame May Whitty, Edmund Gwenn, Reginald Denny, Billy Gilbert.

The current war isn't very funny; this picture, with the current war as a background, is exceedingly so.

The setting is London today, London under the Nazi bombs. Boy meets girl in a bomb shelter during a raid; another raid breaks up a cafe party at which boy is trying to win girl away from her stolid British escort; when the scene shifts to London, boy and girl are surrounded by Nazi intrigue. And yet, the result is comedy, light and effervescent, often risque, seldom strained.

MacMurray plays a brash, forthputting Texan flying bombers to Britain; Miss Carroll (and never was a more luscious blond) is the staid British girl who's afraid of being "upset" by contact with life as he typifies it; Loder is the slightly stuffy, fine Britisher ('stout-fella-chin-up-sun-never-sets" is the hero's tag for him) who plays watchdog over the girl.

There's some resemblance, not too much, to the play, "There's Always Juliet" from which the film is taken. The modern touches, bringing in the war and Lisbon (instead of Paris), accent comedy and shun war horror. Even the Nazi agents, operating in Lisbon convey no menace in the usual style. Edmund Gwenn, as the British minister for whom the heroine is chauffeur, typifies in quiet humor the British attitude toward the war, making the slight propaganda motif most acceptable, and demonstrating that Hollywood has become more clever in this respect lately.

"Affectionately Yours." Screenplay by Edward Kaufman from story by Fanya Foss and Aleen Leslie. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. Principals: Merle Oberon, Dennis Morgan, Rita Hayworth, Ralph Bellamy, George Tobias, James Gleason, Hattie McDaniel, Jerome Cowan, Butterfly McQueen.

* * *

Morgan plays a freely romantic foreign correspondent who gets hot and bothered when he hears his wife (Oberon) has divorced him. He ducks his latest girl friend (Hayworth) and flies back to New York to stop his ex-s marriage to that bewildered bumpkin Ralph Bellamy has been playing in so many pictures since "The Awful Truth."

FINAL ASSEMBLY GAVEL TO BANG

House, Senate Leaders to Sign Bills Tomorrow, Adjourn 94th Session.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS—Only a handful of legislators will be on hand in the state capitol tomorrow when house and senate write "finis" to their 1941 session.

Presiding officers of both houses are slated to call members to order in the afternoon—probably about 2 p. m.

About 80 bills passed prior to the recess early this month will be signed by Lieut.-Gov. Paul M. Herbert (R.) of Columbus and House Speaker William McCulloch (R.) of Miami.

This process of enrolling over, the ninety-fourth general assembly will adjourn sine die and only a special call of the governor can bring them back.

One of the bills to be enrolled is the $352,000,000 appropriation measure to operate the state government in the next biennium.

There is much discussion of a special session later this year and possibly next year, but it is of the type that generally follows adjournment and no one can gauge its accuracy.

SIX CHILDREN GET WILD RIDE ON RUNAWAY ELEPHANT AT ZOO

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND — Six children breathlessly told playmates today of a wild ride on the back of a runaway elephant while their parents gratefully described the bravery of a 35-year-old keeper who saved the six from serious injury or possible death.

The youngsters were riding in a basket-like howdah atop the Cleveland zoo's four-ton elephant, Osa, when the animal suddenly bolted for her quarters.

Storming past a fleeing crowd of several thousand persons, the elephant raced through open doors into the building. There was not enough clearance for the passenger basket and it was ripped from her back, plunging the children toward the ground.

Keeper Joe Chery, running behind the jittery animal, saw the basket hurtling down and braced himself to take its full weight. His "catch" broke the force of the fall and allowed the children to escape with bruises and lacerations.

Capt. Curley Wilson, zoo superintendent, said the usually docile elephant, a gift from Frank Buck, quieted down after reaching her quarters and would not be punished.

Terms Cleveland WPA Probe 'Lies, Key-Hole Gossip'

CLEVELAND — (U.P.) — In the wake of an Ohio senate investigation into alleged inequalities and waste on Cleveland WPA projects, WPA District Manager Frank T. Miskell charged today that the probe was built on a "half-truths, downright lies and key-hole gossip."

Miskell said there had been on the Cleveland projects a proportionate decline in administrative staffs with the reduction in the work program.

Denying that there had been favoritism or nepotism in WPA, he added that Senator James Metzenbaum, (D., Cuyahoga) instigator of the investigation, had conducted it in an "outrageous, insulting and indecent manner."

He claimed the senator "apparently wanted to have a field day at our expense."

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

The Lima Pandas are becoming just a bit desperate in their efforts to end their losing ways in the Ohio State league and build up to a point where they can measure up to the rest of the loop.

After all, Lima is admittedly the best ball town in the circuit, but it won't be that way if the Pandas get pushed around every time they step upon the greensward.

* * *

But the fact remains that there are certain rules governing the classification of ball players in the Ohio State league, and the salary they shall receive.

And dough or no dough, the Pandas are finding it difficult now to find the players who come under the league classification rules who will play for the kind of dough the league pays, and who are good enough to put Lima back on its accustomed winning path.

Oh where, oh where, have our league champions gone,
And where, and oh where, can they be?
They're on the top of the loop, if you care to stoop,
Or stand on your head and you'll see.

Two youngsters from Buffalo, Al Salay, outfielder, and Morris Bob, shortstop, checked in with the Pandas at the Fairground yesterday, signed a contract at 1 o'clock, and were ready to play. They both got to play, too.

Salay started in right field, demonstrated a great throwing arm and a keen judgment of fly balls, and, on his first sortie to the dish in the Ohio State league, clouted one of Pat Patterson's mound offerings outside the lot over the left field fence.

Bob also got in the game in the fifth inning, connected for one for two, and turned in three sparkling assists from the short field.

* * *

The woods are full, these days, of good young ball players who tried out this spring with different ball clubs all over the country, and who were almost good enough to stick, but who were given the pink slip only because of league limitations on the number of players allotted to each team.

The Braves turned loose more than one boy who could help the Pandas now.

Those are the kids Lima is turning to in an effort to build back up again. And where else could they turn?

* * *

What in the heck have they all done wrong?
They haven't won a game in so dog-gone long.
If it rains or snows or freezes,
They'll be shivering in the breezes,
For they haven't won a game in so dog-gone long.

Columbus Gets Help From Cards

(By Associated Press)

Now that reinforcements have arrived from the St. Louis Cardinals, maybe the Columbus Redbirds are ready to fulfill the rosy predictions of the experts in the American Association race.

* * *

The Cards, their parent club, recently shipped Outfielder Harry Walker and Pitcher Johnny Grodzicki to the Redbirds. Both played an important part in Columbus' double conquest of Louisville in a Sabbath doubleheader, 10 to 2 and 12 to 8.

Grodzicki set the Colonels down with six hits and won easily as his mates pounded out 19 hits off lefty LeFevbre, including Walker's "perfect" mark of six hits.

The Toledo Hens matched Columbus' fast Sunday pace by whipping Indianapolis twice, 13 to 3 and 6 to 5.

Kansas City and Minneapolis split two games. The Blues opened up with a home run attack to win the first contest, 11 to 7. The Millers won the second 6 to 3.

St. Paul moved into sixth place with a double win over lowly Milwaukee, 7 to 6 and 2 to 0.

PLAN TOURNEY

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Voting to hold its first tournament in Columbus next January, the new Ohio State Moose Bowling association elected Ralph Midlam of Dayton president, and Harold Schafer of Delaware, Earl Feist of Steubenville and George Schonbaum of Hamilton, vice presidents. William Lefever of Lorain was named to the executive committee.

Mansfield Swamps Lima Pandas 15-3

Collect Eight Runs In First Frame On Eight Hits; Pat Fans Twelve.

MANSFIELD'S BRAVES spotted themselves to a slugging bee yesterday afternoon at the Fairground as they swamped the Lima Pandas, 15-3.

But they took all the joy out of life for the fairly large Sunday crowd by batting more than around in the first inning and piling up eight runs on as many hits, a base on balls and two errors.

Because the ball game was over right then and there as far as the final outcome was concerned. And the fans knew it, and the Pandas knew it, but the Braves, filled with the flush of success, just wouldn't let the game die on their hands, and insisted on scoring in four of the remaining seven innings to pile up the count and better their batting averages.

There was no one to blame them of course, since batting averages are bread and butter to ball players from D league on up. And some day when averages are computed, the hits and the runs they made this day will be lost in the shuffle, but they'll add important points to that Pct. column.

* * *

In all the holocaust and shambles of a bingle jamboree such as the Braves put on yesterday afternoon, the winning pitcher and his importance naturally shrink to a low degree, but Schuyler, the Pat, Patterson, who was flinging for the Braves on this sunny afternoon, wouldn't have it that way.

Pat gave up a measly six hits, walked only one batter, and fanned 12 to boost his season's record against the Pandas to 28 strikeouts in 18 innings.

He was master all the way, and there was none to say him nay, none that is, except Al Salvay, rookie Lima outfielder who slammed one of the Patterson pitches high and far away over the left field fence for a home run in the second inning.

There were batting heroes, naturally, in that Brave victory, and chief among them was Bill Salem, slugging center-fielder from Cleveland, who tagged the apple for five hits in six trips to the platter, including two doubles and three singles. Bill was very disgusted when he was called out on strikes on that other trip, but he did well enough for himself for one day.

Most unusual stick mark for the day went to Bob Ankrum, Brave shortstop, who has been setting a bit of a record for himself as a slugger.

Bob drew three straight walks, then crashed through with a single, picked up another pass to first, and then clouted a double for a perfect day, two for two.

* * *

Dick Morse, scintillating third sacker, had a perfect day too, a pair of dubles and a single in three trips, until he twisted an ankle on that last two sacker, and was forced to leave the game.

McGrath, TeStruth and Patterson each checked in with two for five, and Mangan and Mutryn joined the hit parade with a bingle apiece.

The Braves go to Fremont tonight, and are booked back on the home lot tomorrow night for the first appearance here this season of Manager Chappie Geygan and his Fremont Green Sox.

Providents Win Couple

Beat Cuyahoga Falls, Elyria on Same Day.

Mansfield Provident girls played like the state softball champions they are to win two games in as many cities yesterday, turning in a 14 to 10 verdict in a slugging bee at Cuyahoga Falls in the afternoon, and a neat 9 to 4 victory at Elyria at night.

* * *

Fran Knapp was the winning hurler in both games, going the route at Elyria after relieving LaVonna Schaeffer in the fracas at the Falls.

The Providents did their share of clouting in the afternoon tilt, paced by Bucky Holda with a home run and double Mary Bessemer and Margaret Tipul crashed through with triples, and Ev Jocha and Ruth Whiteman connected for doubles.

Slugger Jean Herrick provided the only circuit clout in the Elyria game, while Holda and Whiteman each added a double to their day's total of extra-base blows.

* * *

The Mansfield girls will be back on their home lot at Johns Park for a Memorial Day game with the Columbus Wilks Meats and next Sunday when they meet the Columbus J. & K. Shoes.

Joe Louis Needs First Aid

Joe Louis, sporting a patch over his bruised right eye, injured in his bout with Buddy Baer, is pictured in his dressing room in Washington after he was awarded the decision in his heavyweight title clash with Baer. Baer was disqualified by Referee Arthur Donovan because his seconds were still in the ring when the bell rang for the start of the seventh round.

Veterans And Youngsters Vie For Open Golf Title

NEW YORK — (AP) — The energetic youngsters who still claim golf is an old man's game and golfing oldsters who maintain that tournaments are only for the young fellows, can find plenty of fuel for their arguments today.

For the entry list for the 1941 national open golf championship is loaded with colorful veterans and sharpshooting newcomers who have to win their places in the main tournament through today's sectional qualifying rounds.

Approximately 1,000 players have to fire 36 holes apiece in 27 different locations. Of these 128 will win the right to join 42 exempted stars in the open at Fort Worth, Tex., June 5, 6 and 7. The field is the smallest in nearly a decade, due mainly to the fact that Fort Worth is so far from the big eastern and mid-western golfing centers, but it's still strong enough to keep all but the best from qualifying.

Today's field includes such famous players as Harry Cooper, Denny Shute, Johnny Bulla, Dutch Harrison, Ky Laffoon, Bill Mehlhorn, Jock Hutchison, Sr., Paul Runyan, who yesterday won the Goodall round-robin tourney; Jimmy Demaret, Jimmy Thompson, Clayton Heafner, Joe Turnesa and four of his brothers; Sam Byrd, Joe Kirkwood, Sr. and Jr., Bobby Cruickshank, Al and Abe Espinosa, Chick Harbert, Leonard Dodson, Don Schumacher, and George Von Elm.

Ohio selects its seven entries from the 63 competing in two qualifying meets over the Congress Lake course in Hartville, Stark county, and the Losantiville layout in Cincinnati. Five qualifiers will come from the Cleveland district and the other two from the Queen City area.

Former champions are automatically eligible, putting Byron Nelson of Toledo and Billy Burke of Cleveland in the field. Nelson took the title in 1939, eight years after Burke's victory.

The Cincinnati field of 16, including 11 pros, lost its star attraction with the withdrawal of Johnny Fischer, former national amateur champion. He dropped out because of a wrist injury.

Jesse Reid of Middletown is a leading contender at Cincinnati.

Conn Fights Buddy Knox

Title Challengers To Turn Sluggers Tonight.

PITTSBURGH — (AP) — Threatened with the "sudden death" of his heavyweight title dreams unless he wins decisively, Billy Conn may turn slugger tonight as he seeks to smash down Buddy Knox, unsung Dayton, O., boxer in a final 15-round pre-Louis "test" before a hometown crowd.

This strange transition from master boxer into fistic dynamiter became vitally necessary for Conn through an ultimatum by Mike Jacobs which virtually ordered Billy to win by a knockout or sacrifice his rights to a title crack at Champion Joe Louis next month in New York.

Since Billy is the kind of a guy who would try to belt Knox over the right field stands at Forbes field, scene of the fight, rather than be deprived of his title chance, the fans expect a lot of cannonading.

The Dayton boy claims he will spring a major upset by whipping Billy and projecting himself into a seat at the heavyweight title table where the financial cake is richest.

Jeff Hits Record Home Run

Feller Turns In Ninth Victory By Shutout.

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Bob Feller pitched his ninth victory of the season yesterday, striking out 13 batters, giving only two walks and scattering seven hits in blanking St. Louis, 6 to 0.

* * *

Despite the brilliant 86-victory-a-year pace being set by the young fireballer, he had to move over today and let Jeff Heath bask in the spotlight.

* * *

Jeff, fourth in the American league with a batting average of .360, smashed one of Johnny Allen's offerings high into the upper deck of the stadium for his ninth home run of the year. It marked the first time in nine years of playing at the lakeside oval that a batter has driven a ball into the top tier although such sluggers as Babe Ruth, Hank Greenberg, Joe DiMaggio, Lou Gehrig and Jimmy Foxx have had plenty of shots.

In addition to the record blow, Heath blasted a single and a triple to collect a third of Cleveland's hits off Allen and Johnny Niggeling.

Feller struck out the side in the second and third innings and after filling the bases in the sixth, fanned the next three batters.

* * *

Cleveland picked up its first two runs in the second on Hal Trosky's single, Heath's triple and a fly. Heath poled his homer in the fourth. In the fifth Roy Weatherly and Gerry Walker doubled, Walker stole third and scored on a drive to the outfield.

Lou Boudreau tallied the sixth run two innings later when he singled, advanced on a sacrifice and passed ball and romped home on an error.

The decision was the fifth in a row for the Redskins, maintaining their 4½ game lead over Chicago.

Detroit opened a two-contest stand today, with Al Smith and Buck Newsom the pitching nominees.

The St. Louis Cards, setting a breathless pace in the National league, open a new series against the Chicago Cubs today with a patched-up infield, the result of an injury to their sensational rookie second baseman, Frank Crespi.

* * *

Crespi suffered a fractured finger yesterday as the flying leaders were sweeping a double-header with the Pittsburgh Pirates by scores of 6 to 4 and 4 to 3, and probably will be out for a fortnight.

* * *

Old Lefty Grove inched nearer his lifetime goal of 300 victories as he notched No. 296 at the expense of the New York Yankees, 10 to 3. The great southpaw gave up only seven hits and would have scored a shut-out if Jimmy Foxx had not dropped Charlie Kelle's pop foul for the third out in the fourth inning. Keller, given a life, then hit a home run with two on.

The Chicago White Sox, after having gone scoreless for 26 straight innings, burst loose with a seven-run rally in the seventh frame at Detroit to knock Hal Newhouser from the hill and win 7 to 3. Thornton Lee went the route for the Sox..

The Athletics swept their three-game series with Washington by jumping on the eminent knuckleballer, Dutch Leonard, for five runs in the eighth. The score was 7 to 3.

With Joe Medwick dropped down to seventh place in the batting order, the Brooklyns made the most of five hits to beat the Phillies, 8 to 4. Young Pete Reiser's sixth-inning homerun with the bases filled was the blow that ruined Ike Pearson. Whit Wyatt again failed to last for the Dodgers, and Bill Swift got credit for the win.

Charley Root bested Paul Derringer in a tense duel as the Chicago Cubs nosed out Cincinnati, 3 to 2, in the ninth.

The Boston Braves trotted out 22 players, but still lost to the Giants, 6 to 2.

It's not that the school district needs money. The reason it had to abandon the old one was that a fine producing well was located 10 feet from the door and the state fire marshal decided it was too close for safety.

HESITANCY IN PRICES SLOWS STOCK MARKET

Steel Rationing For Civilian Use Becomes Problem, Rules Requested.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Price hesitancy was the rule in today's stock market although little real selling pressure was observed in any department. Dealings were sluggish from the start.

Brokers found a sizable assortment of buying handicaps but the sparcity of offerings, all things considered, helped prop speculative sentiment to some extent.

Market analysts scanned the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said rationing of the metal for civilian use was becoming more of a problem and that several steelmakers have expressed the desire that Washington lay down rules to govern them.

Another look was taken at rubber company stocks as the Rubber Manufacturers' association estimated output of tires in April touched the highest mark since June, 1933.

BRING ON FOOD I'M NOT AFRAID

"But it was not always like that, because I know as well as anyone what it means to suffer and deny myself many things I want to eat knowing how it would be about an hour after meals," says Mrs. Libbie Rees, living at Mt. Vernon, O.

"If I am constipated, many things upset my stomach causing symptoms like acid indigestion that fills me with gas, bloats my stomach till my breath comes hard; such palpitation my clothes feel tight; and a burning sensation in my stomach. Also, when constipated I awaken many mornings with symptoms like feeling tired, achy, with a headache, spots floating before my eyes, and when I stoop over my head is dizzy, due to constipation.

"But Vendol is marvelous. It gives me astonishing temporary relief from constipation, acts so nicely, easily, and completely and when I'm not constipated I never have even a symptom like acid indigestion, and all the other troubles, described above. Bring on the food, for I'm not afraid to eat whatever I want."

If you need a medicine like this don't delay getting Vendol. Give it a chance to prove what it may do for you also. All druggists sell it, and thousands all around here use Vendol and say it's great. Recommended by Central Drug Store, cor. Main and Fourth streets.
